FOSS TO VETO FIRE PENSIONS

Governor Foss has prepared a veto of the Boston firemen's pension bill, to be be filed with the clerk of either the House or Senate Monday.

This bill provides for retirement on half-pay of Boston firemen who have become incapacitated during service, also for retirement on half-pay of men who have served twenty-five years. Retirement in the latter case shall be at their own volition. In case of total disability, the pension shall be two-thirds of the regular pay.

It is understood that the Governor objects chiefly to that part of the bill making it possible for a fireman to retire on half-pay at the end of twenty-five years' service, although he may be in good health. This provision would make it possible for an able man, who had entered the service at twenty-one years, to retire at the age of forty-six.

Senator Lomasney Aroused.

The breach between Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald over the Governor's purpose to veto the bill for a raise in salaries for elementary teachers is the one topic of discussion at City Hall. Today it was learned that Senator Joseph P. Lomasney was present at the conference between the Governor and the Mayor, and that it was with difficulty that the chief democrat and leader of the Ward 8 leader restrained his feelings.

Senator Lomasney was deeply interested in the teachers' bill. The expressed determination of the Governor to disapprove roused the Senator, and when the Mayor failed to convince Governor Foss that it would be good policy to sign the bill, the Ward 8 politician was wrathy.

Today it was whispered that one of the Mayor's deuteronomy in the City Council will introduce a resolution in the City Council placing that body on record as favoring the bill. It will be a final shot from City Hall.

Teachers Plan Campaign.

The teachers are planning an active campaign against Governor Foss in the event of his vetoing the measure. Today a number of them called up the Mayor and urged his co-operation in the fight. The Mayor stated that he had nothing further to add than was outlined in his statement.

"Governor Foss's veto of the teachers' bill and the 54-hour bill will make him a heavy load for the Democratic party to carry this Fall," was the way in which the Mayor let it be known that he was ready to withdraw his support from the man whose nomination he fought for tooth and nail in and after the Democratic convention.

The teachers' bill, some politicians say, brings about a break that has been threatened for some time, although they insist that the Mayor is none the less earnest in his advocacy of the measure to aid the two thousand members of the Elementary Teachers' Club.

Open War Come.

The crisis came when the Governor and the Mayor met in the executive office at the State House to discuss the bill. The Governor frankly told the Mayor he proposed to veto it because of the clause that makes it mandatory for the school committee to apply a certain percentage of the appropriation exclusively to raising salaries. The Mayor protested, but in vain.

The Mayor left in a state of high tension of mind and today it was announced that the teachers will attempt to carry the bill, for which they have put in two years of hard fighting, over the Governor's veto. The Mayor thinks they will succeed.

Governor Foss declares that he has no objects to the teachers getting an increase, but he does not want the Legislature to dictate to the School Committee, asserting that the bill, as it now stands, violates the principle of home rule for Boston.

He feels that the teachers should get the increase and is willing that the Legislature should provide the needed money.

He opposes the provision that the

FIREBUG IMPERILS 35 LIVES

Vincente Anzalini jumped from a first-story window to the ground, followed by his wife and three children, whom he caught in his arms, and thirty other persons, seventeen of whom were children, fled to the street during an incendiary fire early today in the four-and-a-half-story brick tenement house at No. 15 D-II street, North End.

The blaze is thought to have been set by the firebug who has spread terror throughout the North End during the past two months. Three policemen from the Hanover street station were patrolling Hull street when the fire started, but the firebug escaped without being seen.

Eight families lived in the house, two on each of the four floors, and if it had not been for the timely discovery of the fire by Pasquale Di Pesa, an aged man who lives on the top floor and who awakened the occupants, several might have perished in the flames.

Children Leap from Window.

Anzalini, with his wife, Guiseppina, and three children, Amandi, five; John, four, and a seven-months-old baby, Annie, occupied an apartment on the front of the first floor. They were awakened by the cries of Di Pesa. Anzalini opened the door leading into the hallway from the kitchen and he was met by a cloud of flame and smoke which blocked his way to the front stairs. Shouting to his wife to follow him with the three children, Anzalini shut the door and ran to the front of his suite. He threw open the window and jumped to the ground, a distance of ten feet. Mrs. Anzalini, carrying the baby, led the other two children to the window. John climbed out onto the sill and jumped into his father's arms. He was followed by Amandi. Mrs. Anzalini then dropped the baby to her husband, after which she jumped.

In the meantime those living on the upper floors of the building had been awakened by Di Pesa and Mrs. Louisa Pasquale and fled to the street.

Aged Man Gives Alarm.

As soon as the police and firemen reached the scene they realized that the blaze was of incendiary origin and a search for the firebug was immediately started. Every policeman in the North End was warned to be on the lookout for the firebug. Several persons were questioned by the police, but no one was held.

The blaze was similar to thirty other fires set by the firebug in the North End. A heap of rubbish, broken pictures frames, books and old paper were found blazing on a shelf near the foot of the basement stairs and a short distance from the gas meter. The flames had spread from the shelf to the wall and were rapidly eating their way up the basement stairs to the first floor when discovered.

Di Pesa, who is seventy years old, was descending the stairs about 5:20 o'clock when he smelled smoke, and upon investigating found the cellar of the building in flames. He shouted, and went from floor to floor, assisted by Mrs. Pasquale, who was one of the first to be awakened, until he was sure everybody in the house had been aroused.

James Schiffa, who lives on the first floor in the rear, ran into the street and told Patrolmen Durham and Sullivan that the house was on fire. They sent him to Patrolman St. George, who was on duty near Box 707, at Charter and Salem streets, and St. George rang in the alarm while the other two officers rushed into the house.

Schiffa's wife and daughter reached the street before the flames had cut off their escape. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Zapini and their eight children and Mr. and Mrs. William Pasquale fled from the second floor to the street.

The third floor was occupied by John Genesco, his wife and four children and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Genesco and Rose Car-

William DeCourcy, thirty years of age, a driver for the Independent Ice Company, is in the Frost Hospital at Chelsea with a fractured skull sustained when a 250-pound cake of ice fell upon him while he was loading his cart in the Boston & Maine freight yard on Eastern avenue. The block of ice fell from the top of the car through the open door piloting DeCourcy to the ground.

CHAUFFEUR IS A "LABORER"

The Supreme Court says that automobile chauffeurs are manual laborers and that the driving of an automobile is manual labor.

The statement made is an opinion handed down in the case of the widow of George T. Buckley, who sued the Dow Portable Electric Company for the death of her husband, who was thrown from the rear of an automobile owned by the company. She went to the Supreme Court for a new trial, but she fails to get it. She held that the automobile was over-speeding.

"The Court says: 'The driving of the car was not superintendence, but manual labor. It involved no element of supervision. Now was merely a driving servant. Under the law the defendant is not responsible in damages for this conduct so far as it affects a fellow laborer."

MORGAN PRAISES TRUST DECISION BY SUPREME COURT

The attitude of the big financiers and corporations toward the Supreme Court decision to the Standard Oil Trust case, which was at first considered a great victory for the people, is plainly indicated by J. P. Morgan, who in an interview in London said:

"You may quote me as saying that I consider the decision concerning Standard Oil entirely satisfactory; also that I expected it. The recent tone of the American market shows that it is correct."

TECH WINS STATE AID

The Technology appropriation bill is to become a law.

This bill, providing authority for the Legislature to appropriate $100,000 annually for ten years for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, went to the Governor last Monday at 3:35 p. m. This gave the Governor till 3:35 p. m. today to sign the bill, to veto it, or to allow it to become law without his signature.

LOST GIRL HUNTED BY HUNDREDS

All New England began looking today for Miss Gertrude Marie Quimby, the Back Bay Latin School girl, who has been missing since last Monday. The rare beauty of the girl, as shown by the pictures printed in the AMERICAN, has interested thousands in her welfare.

Letters have been received by the mother of the missing girl at No. 549 Audubon road from various sections of New England to which the writers say they believe they have seen Miss Quimby, and manifest as eagerness to help restore her to her mother.

Facts that have just come to light indicate that the girl left home with the determination to make a serious effort to earn her own living. Posing for photographers or artists naturally suggested itself to her because she earned money in Boston through a photographer.

Girl Wept as She Left.

The stage also appealed to her, as she has talent as a toe dancer, and her appearance is such as would appear strongly to stage managers in search of good chorus material.

Mrs. Katherine Travers, who lives below the apartment occupied by Miss Quimby's mother and knew Gertrude well, said that the last time she saw her, which was on Monday, the girl came out of the house carrying a suit case and crying.

Mrs. Travers, when interviewed by an AMERICAN reporter, said: "I met Gertrude for the first time about ten months ago when I came to live at No. 549 Audubon road. She is a beautiful child, very pleasant and willing to make friends. She had two girl friends of her own age who used to come and play with her. She likes to play the piano. She was quick to learn and picked up rapidly the few things she attempted to play. She used to practise for hours at a time until her parents forbade her to go down stairs at all. She was very determined and would bamboozle you until she got the result she was seeking for.

Talked Always of Stage.

"Still a mere child, the glamour of the stage dazzled Gertrude, and her great ambition for years had been to become an actress. She had a collection of pictures of her theatrical favorites, used to follow the news about them with eager interest, and talked constantly of her ambition to be on the stage.

"I discouraged her all I could," Mrs. Travers continued, "and told her she was too young. Besides I don't think she had

LYNCH WHITE MAN FOR ATTACKING WOMAN

BLUEFIELDS, W. Va., May 20.—Trailed by bloodhounds, John Sorkey, who is attacked the wife of an American miner, was caught today and hanged to the limbs and trees of a Catholic church here. Sorkey confessed the crime and pleaded for a court trial. The sheriff made an ineffectual attempt to stay the fury of the mob but was threatened with death if he interfered.

Bluefields had experienced a night of terror with the streets filled with rioters. Sorkey's victim is Mrs. Mary James. Her husband organized a mob. The dogs were loosed on Sorkey, who fled from town and would have killed him had he not been rescued by the sheriff. He was dragged back to town, a rope thrown about his neck and a man climbed the steeple of the church and attached the other end of the rope to the cross.

WORKMAN IS FOUND DEAD IN NAVY YARD

John Gibson, a machinist, living at No. 25 Orton street, Malden, was found dead early today in a coal pocket in the Charlestown navy yard. He had come to work with the other early laborers, about 6 o'clock, and was discovered by a watchman an hour later. Medical Examiner Metirath was notified. The dead man was of middle age, but had no marks about him that would help in identifying him.

He is fifty years old and unmarried.

BESSE CHAPMAN SETTLES

"Lady Betty" Faulkner Chapman Pierce, the Boston stage beauty who said that she would not give up her young husband for a million dollars, will not oppose any longer the legal action to annul her marriage to Rice Ensworth Pierce, former Harvard collegian and son of Henry Clay Pierce, the Standard Oil millionaire, according to despatches from New York today.

The beauteous "Lady Betty" is quoted as saying at her apartments in New York:

"An amicable settlement has been reached. I shall probably return to the stage as Bessie Chapman."

One of the most sensational developments in the annulment fight was an affidavit made against Mrs. Pierce's character by Ralph Waldo White, Justice Morschauser characterized this affidavit as "the most startling arraignment of a woman I ever read."

Mentions Boston People.

The affidavit brought in the names of Boston hotels and Boston men, Harvard collegians pieces in Winthrop and other people and locations.

The case is expected to be heard before Justice Morschauser in the New York Supreme Court at Newburg unless the settlement which has been reported obvious a trial.

Whether there is a trial or not, it is inferred that the metal actress will no longer fight annulment of the marriage and that the efforts of Henry Clay Pierce to free his young son from matrimonial bonds will finally be successful.

Mrs. Pierce, the winsome "Lady Betty," has been one of the foremost stage beauties of the past few years on account of her sensational marriages and the unhappy results therefrom. She is the daughter of the late Robert J. Faulkner of Boston. At the time of their first marriage on January 4, 1895, her parents were living on Dartham street, Boston. She was a wonderfully pretty girl. She is now only thirty-four years old.

Won Stage Success.

When she was seventeen years old she went on the stage for beauty and personal charms winning her easily a trial. She started with a minor role in stock at the Castle Square Theatre. In the old Globe Theatre she played in "The Parisian Romance," then was cast as Rosalind in "As You Like It."

It was not long ago that she gained the soubriquet of "Lady Betty" on account of her magnetic personality and her power to attract friends, especially among men.

She rose to become a member of Richard Mansfield's company. She came back to Boston with this company and, during this engagement met T. Irvin Chapman, the son of one of Boston's oldest and proudest families. This was in 1904.

T. Irvin Chapman was the grandson of the late Mayor Jonathan Chapman, who was known as Boston's most dignified executive. The Chapmans are connected with the Gordon Dexters, the Baldens of Beacon street and other exclusive families.

Conservative Back Bay society was astounded when it became known that T. Irvin Chapman had married "Lady Betty" Faulkner. The marriage took place at Concord on January 4, 1895. The couple went to live with the bride's parents in apartments at the corner of Dartmouth street and Columbus avenue.

Baby Comes to Brighton Home.

Back Bay society absolutely refused to accept "Lady Betty," the beautiful actress. Her personal charms amounted to naught in face of the lack of lineage that the ultra-conservatives thought indispensable to social recognition.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman moved to Walnut Hill. Later they had rooms at the home of Dr. Thomas on Clifford street.

On May 8 a son was born to "Lady Betty," a young babe, destined to be known during its short life as "The Beautiful Chapman baby."

Not even the arrival of the child tended to soften society and some of the husband's relatives against the actress who gradually reports came that Chapman and his wife were drifting apart.

Eventually Mrs. Chapman brought suit

REBELS MOVE ON DIAZ CAPITAL

MEXICO CITY, May 20.—The city of Cuautla has been captured by the insurrectos under General Zapata and General Figueroa has begun his march to capture the national capital. Cuautla was taken after a desperate battle which raged about the town for seven days.

During the fighting the rebels lost 364 men, killed and wounded, and the federal loss is believed to have been exceedingly heavy, although the government commander sent in an official report that only eighteen men had been killed.

General Figueroa began his onward march early to-day from Puente Ixtla and at the same time General Zapata set out with his forces to join Figueroa for a general attack on Cuernavaca. The federals who defended Cuautla have fallen back upon Cuernavaca to reinforce the garrison there.

News that the Figueroa army is marching on the capital followed dispatches giving details of fighting at other places. The whole southern section is aflame with revolt.

Anarchy prevails at Tehuacan and Acambaro, rebels are concentrating on Gandalajara. Desperate fighting is going on at Acapulco, Mazanillo, Iriquato and Dolores Hidalgo, where Independence was declared in 1810. The rebels have captured Cosalo, Sinaloa, and have opened the way to Culiacan, capital of the state.

Madero May Change Plans.

News comes from Juarez that trouble has developed between President Francisco Madero and Judge Carbajal, the federal peace envoy, and what the next twenty-four hours will bring forth no one can predict safely.

Though Madero on Thursday announced that President Diaz through Carbajal had invited him to Mexico City to act as arbiter in Francisco de la Barra when he becomes President, the federal envoy now denies this, giving the lie direct to the insurrecto leader. Madero's determination to stay away from Mexico City until Diaz is actually out of office, announced after news of plans for assassination had reached Juarez, was hailed with joy by the soldiers. There has been a feeling throughout the army that it would be injudicious for the leader of the insurrection to leave Juarez until the main issues whose presidency the whole movement has been aimed was out of office and beyond all possibility of recall.

General Madero called a meeting of his cabinet to proceed with the work of organizing a cabinet that will serve in the provisional government of Mexico. The opinion that General Bernardo Reyes will take is causing considerable anxiety to the insurrecto chieftain. Madero learned that Reyes had been hailed at Havana as the homecard trip by an order from the Mexican government.

Alarm in Capital.

The city is restless, with patrols constantly breaking up crowds and students preparing for demonstrations tomorrow. Many alarming stories are in general circulation today and as a result the calm that followed the anonymous call for peace between Madero and Diaz was disturbed. Crowds gathered before dawn and besieged the newspaper offices and soon as it became known that General Bernardo Reyes will take his stand on the capital. Before noon many thousands had assembled and dispersed they gathered again.

The revolutionists were cheered by news that the General Reyes had reached Havana. A cablegram was dispatched to him several days ago and there are persistent rumors that a military dictatorship is to be proclaimed with Reyes the ruler of Mexico. It was also reported Diaz was dying.

Among the throngs curses were yelled at members of the Chamber of Deputies who refused to pass the bill freeing political prisoners.

Madero's friends were further aroused by newspaper charges that there is a plot to assassinate him in this city. They openly accuse Diaz's supporters and former members of the Cabinet of being involved.

aguerro and the top floor by Mr. and Mrs. Ol Pena, and their two children, Anna, eighteen, and Charles, six, and Joseph Zorga and his wife, Catherine. All escaped in safety.

Durham and Sullivan attempted to beat out the fire in the cellar, but the flames got beyond their control. The firemen, however, succeeded in extinguishing the flames before they spread beyond the cellar stairs and the damage to the building was slight.

It is believed the firebug entered the building by the front door and descended the stairs into the basement. He may have gained entrance to the building from the Copp's Hill burying ground in the rear. That he left the building or the fired way seems certain as the basement door in the front of the building was found locked and the rear door was held fast by an improvised lock made out of a sled.

The front door is unlocked to admit the policemen at 2:30 o'clock every morning and is left open until midnight. A policeman was only preceding the alarm could be before 5 o'clock and the fire was set some time during the hour twenty minutes. No body could be found who had seen any stranger may either enter or leave the building.

Durham, Sullivan and St. George, the three policemen assigned to the beat, did on the route which takes in Hull street, have no sense of the firebug, and his movements are a mystery. Durham and Sullivan had been several times before the house, Schiffa rushed into the street and told them of the fire. The building is owned by Bartholomew Gazala.

BUILDING LABORERS TO STRIKE JUNE 1

The big building laborers unions are preparing for a possible strike when their new wage scale goes into effect on June 1, although very few changes are looked for in the existing agreement. To that end they have called three mass meetings in Wells Memorial Hall, one of which was held last night, the dates being Wednesday, May 24, Sunday, May 28, and Wednesday, May 31, as well as a special meeting of Local No. 723 at No. 256 Hartford avenue to-morrow afternoon. Dominic de Allesandro, international president of the union, and some general president of the American Federation of Labor, will address the meetings. A special effort will be made to unionize the entire calling in Greater Boston before the new wage scale goes into effect. Among other things the union demands that on jobs where the rent hourly rate, now paid masons' tenders, be extended to concrete and general construction men. The present rate of thirty cents an hour for excavators is not to be changed.

11 DAYS LEFT IN MAY OFFER

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Only eleven days more for the special May offer in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest.

Forty-two prizes, aggregating $1,050 in value, are offered to the forty-two contestants polling the most votes BY SUBSCRIPTION between May 1 and May 31, up to 10 p. m., inclusive.

1	$500	Homer speed power boat	$500
1	$150	Diamond Ring	150
10	$15	Phonographs	150
10	$10	Gold mesh silver mesh bags, or	100
10	$10	Solid gold cuff links	100
10	$10	Gold pendants, or	100
10	$10	Gold watch fobs	100
10	$5	Sets of Setos—In bound books in each set	50
42			$1,050

This is one of the best special monthly offers made during the entire contest, and is the best special offer of any kind which will be made.

This special May offer is an extra incentive to brisk work now. The prizes are unusually attractive. The first prize, for instance, is a handsome Homer boat, one of the best in the market to-day.

This Homer speed power boat is listed at $500 and is worth every cent of that valuation. It is a twenty-foot runabout with four-foot two-inch beam. The specifications call for the best Oregon cedar planking, full fitting, including flagstaff, a four horsepower Waltman engine and all necessaries required under government regulations. This runabout will develop a speed of ten knots an hour or more and is one of the classiest power boats afloat.

With such a prize as this for a starter and with forty-one other desirable rewards, the special May offer is particularly tempting. Candidates are urged not to delay sending in subscriptions, but to rush them in as fast as they can get them. A new list of candidates' standing will soon be published. It is well to have as many votes to your credit as possible before the polls are closed for the new list.

Remember, also, that the main contest closes June 15. It has less than four weeks now to run.

EAST BOSTON FIRE CAUSES $50 LOSS

ONE KISS, $500, COURT RULING

PROVIDENCE, May 20.—The Supreme Court has ruled that Mrs. Susan E. Chapin is entitled to $500 from Mauldren M. Stone, a business man, for a kiss.

Chief Justice Dubois handed down two opinions sustaining the award of the jury in the Superior Court. The request of Stone for a new trial was refused on the ground that he failed to specify wherein the jury did not give him a fair and impartial trial.

The form of action in the kissing case was assault. Mrs. Chapin claimed that she went into the defendant's store and that he came up behind her, seized her by the arms and implanted a kiss on her face. The case went to the Supreme Court in the first instance on the defendant's bill of exceptions, which was overruled and judgment was ordered entered on the verdict.

TRY TO BURN NURSERY.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., May 20.—Incendiarism was thrice resorted to in an attempt to destroy the Woonsocket Day Nursery, in which were twenty children. Fire Marshal Arthur J. Sutton found papers and rags saturated with kerosene in several places on the upper floor.

Special Notice.

GLENN CURTISS, AVIATOR, HURT

KEUKA, N. Y., May 20.—Glenn H. Curtiss, the aviator, was seriously injured as the result of his aeroplane crashing to the ground at the finish of a flight at Hammondsport. The accident happened last Wednesday night, but did not become known until to-day. Curtiss was injured about the head and the aeroplane was demolished.

Pew witnessed the flight and mishap.

Curtiss was using a 1911 model monoplane, equipped with a water-skimming device, similar to a pontoon, and flying over Keuka Lake. He was demonstrating how a craft could be brought down to the level of the water and then skim over it like a bird, sometimes resting on it bodily.

Quickest Relief Known For all Foot Troubles

The following is absolutely the surest and quickest treatment obtainable for all foot troubles: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of hot water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts." (A shorter time will not bring results.) The effect will be a revelation. All soreness gone and the feet feel so good you could sing for joy. This treatment should be repeated each night until the cure is permanent. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. Bunions are reduced. Sweaty, smelling feet, tender and aweless feet usually need but a few applications. Any druggist has Calocide in stock or will get it from his wholesale house. Twenty-five cents buys sufficient to cure the worst feet in good condition. Calocide should not be confused with patent medicines. Perhaps it was used only by the profession, but it is now used by the general public, and is the favorite absorbent remedy in those who have been experimenting with medicated powders and tablets against her husband for divorce. This suit was heard before the late Judge Bond on March 17, 1905. It took "Lady Betty" just fifteen minutes in which to secure her decree. She testified in part:

BESSIE CHAPMAN GIVES UP FIGHT

"My husband deserted me in 1901. Since that time I have been at home with my parents. My child has been with me. My husband has given me nothing for our support."

Her parents corroborated the wife's story. The baby of which Mrs. Chapman spoke had been dead three years.

Awarded $3,000 Alimony.

"I loved my husband," said Mrs. Chapman to the Judge," and was anxious to live with him up to the time of baby's death. The last time I saw him was in June, 1898, when I went to his office on State Street and tried to induce him to return to me."

What had happened was this: Chapman, induced, it was said, by his creditors, had gone to the Orient. His wife testified that the last she knew of him he was in Japan. He was also reported as being in Australia.

Mrs. Chapman secured her decree. Chapman was ordered to pay her $5,000 down and $10 a week alimony till further notice. The reports of the case at that time said that there was much doubt concerning the collection of this alimony as Chapman was so far away. Counsel for the Chapman estate called attention to the fact that there was no provision in the treaty between America and Japan for collection of alimony.

Model for Gibson.

Freed from marriage "Lady Betty" went to New York to join Charles Frohman's "The College Widow" Company.

She also posed for Charles Dana Gibson and Howard Chandler Christy. Her fame as a model was already known. In 1901, when she was Mrs. Chapman, she posed for a full-length portrait by Louis Kronberg, the Boston artist. When this painting was exhibited it naturally attracted much attention from society as well as from artists.

During the next three or four years the name of "Bessie Chapman," as she was known, crept into the papers in connection with stage matters. Enterprising press agents found her beauty and lifestory good "copy." She acted in various theatrical companies, including those of Marie Dressler, Robert Edeson and other stars.

Finally, in August, 1910, Bessie Chapman sprang into the limelight again with a blast of publicity. Cables from Carlsbad, Austria, said that she was reported as betrothed to Baron James Ormond de Rothschild, a member of the great financial family of that name.

The Carlsbad story said that Mrs. Chapman had come from America to Europe in June, 1910, and had arrived in Paris just in time for the Grand Prix. The Baron James, the cables duly related, is an enthusiast on fast horses and pretty women. He met Bessie Chapman. She wore the Rothschild blue and gold at the Grand Prix. The Baron's horse won. The victory was, of course, partly due to the fair mascotte. It was enough. Bessie Chapman was the fiancee of the Baron. The American newspapers published columns, reviewing Bessie Chapman's interesting history therein.

Marries Young Peirce.

Bessie didn't wed the Baron.

But she did marry Roy E. Pierce, twenty-eight years old, and son of the Standard Oil millionaire, Henry Clay Pierce. Her second marriage stirred up as much talk as her first.

According to one of the Pierce attorneys, who would not consent to be quoted by name, "Mrs. Chapman will not oppose the action for the very good reason that she has no defence. We have proved all our points and are confident of winning the case. We are not responsible for any statement she or her attorney may make, but you can state absolutely that there has been no compromise on our part."

Whether the alleged agreement was reached by the aid of cupid or Blackstone, the beauteous Lady Betty refused to state.

"I can tell you absolutely nothing," she said in her apartments on Central Park, South, New York. "I am pledged to absolute secrecy. What the terms of the settlement were, whether my husband will return to me or what further legal steps will be taken I cannot say. But an agreement that settles the whole matter has been reached."

Pledged to Secrecy.

The first inkling that Mrs. Pierce would not oppose the annulment proceedings came on Wednesday, when there was scheduled in the Supreme Court at White Plains, N. Y., before Justice Morschauser a hearing on Mrs. Pierce's application for a change of venue. On that occasion Jame Hickey, Mrs. Pierce's counsel, was to file an answer to an affidavit against the young wife's character made by Ralph Waldo White.

It was reported that the case is on the calendar for trial before Justice Morschauser at Newburg. Mrs. Pierce said that she will not go to Newburg, and does not know what legal steps are to follow.

Roy Pierce is said to be at present in a sanitarium at Central Valley, N. Y.

HOLD PICNIC AT WILLARD LODGE

Several hundred people motored to Likewise lodge, the country home of the Fraternity, Willard Settlement at Bedford, and enjoyed an entertainment and luncheon in celebration of the first anniversary of the founding of the lodge. Society was well represented and several hundred people of surrounding towns journeyed to the place by trolley and trains.

Miss Isabel Sturdy of Attleboro was in charge of the exhibition and sale of articles made by the women at the lodge during the Winter. Miss M. L. Cutler and Mrs. Dawes of the lodge explained the work of the lodge room. An entertainment on the lawn by the children of the settlement under the direction of Miss Nellie F. Hill and Miss Ruth Wheeler consisted of free hand exercises, a May play in two acts, folk dances and a doubbell drill. "Likewise Rhymes," by Mrs. S. G. R. Clark, compiled especially for the occasion, proved an attractive souvenir. Lunch was served by the ladies of Bedford under the leadership of Mrs. David C. Torrey, with the Notaman Club members for waiters. The music was in charge of Miss Florence Devers of Boston.

"STARS AND BARS U. S. EMBLEM," SAYS GUDGER

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Confederate flag—the "Stars and Bars"—is the national emblem of the people of the United States according to a statement by Representative Gudger of North Carolina in the Congressional Record. Mr. Gudger spoke Wednesday. Following is the peroration of his revised speech as it appears in the Record:

"In a great country like ours, stretching from ocean to ocean, from lake to gulf, embracing within its limits every kind of soil, capable of producing everything used by man, the trade privileges of the greatest government on earth should be retained and used for the people who flout the stars and bars.

"Oh," he said with a smile, "it was just a slip of the tongue. Thinking more of the stars and bars than of the stars and stripes, I said it."

CATHOLIC CHURCH DIGNITARIES COMING

Many dignitaries of the Catholic Church, including Cardinal Gibbons, are expected to take part in the exercises incident to the laying of the corner-stone of the new Boston College at Newton Heights the first or second week in October. The affair will bring together thousands of people from all parts of the country.

The alumni of Boston College are working energetically for the success of the affair, and have promised the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of the college, that they will assist him to raise $50,000 before the exercises are held. This work has the approval of Archbishop O'Connell.

Some time ago announcement was made that the corner stone would be laid this Spring, but the condition of the land impeded the work. It is now planned to hold some form of open air entertainment at the grounds the latter part of September.

FALSE WEIGHT CASES IN LYNN

Twenty-five prosecutions of Lynn men for using dishonest scales are announced by State Sealer of Weights and Measures Daniel C. Palmer. Mayor Connery has been informed by letter that Lynn is the worst city in the State in regard to false measures. But some dealers in other cities are to be prosecuted.

Mr. Palmer has been busy against strawberry dealers in Boston on account of boxes which contain less than a quart and are not filled to the brim. The strawberry men assert that it is impossible to get full measure boxes, because the boxes shrink and the berries cannot be shifted from one box to another without injury.

Mr. Palmer says some Lynn measures show a shortage of 14.18 per cent. The report mentions the case of one store where there is an error of one ounce in every pound sold. It was an inaccurate scale found in general use.

In the case of the ice wagons a study, he says, reveals errors favoring the ice dealers to the extent of 10 per cent. The junk dealers are found to be in a bad position. Of eight balances examined seven had not been sealed. Of the seven five were false, involving a gain of 20 per cent. to the junk dealer.

A scale in the Boston & Maine station is said to show an error of fourteen pounds of express matter weighed. In milk bottles a deficiency of 3.79 per cent. is found.

TROUBLES OF A FAT FISHERMAN

Luke Malone, who is forty years old and comes from Upper Canada Village, Nova Scotia, gloried in the title of "champion fat fisherman of the T wharf fleet" until rheumatic fever took him laid four days ago at sea. But when the Viking got in at T wharf he had good reason to lament his 285 pounds.

An ambulance from the Marine Hospital in Chelsea was called and the driver and two interns went down into the forecastle, where Luke lay in his bunk. The companionway is not very ample and they couldn't use an ordinary stretcher. They finally got the sick man into a basket stretcher and with the aid of a number of volunteers dragged him to the deck.

By that time there was not much left of the basket, which had been creaking and cracking ominously, and Luke positively refused to permit himself to be hoisted to it by means of block and tackle to the wharf, fifteen feet above. The interns did not want to risk it either, and there was a long delay.

Then a fertile mind contrived a scheme. The basket stretcher was made fast to one end of a long ladder. The other end was lifted over the capstan of the wharf and nudged along as far as it would go. Then ten husky men got on the upper end and the ladder was seesawed up and down until it was gradually dragged, heave by heave, over the edge of the wharf. The man in the basket had to be lifted over every time his end dropped, but it was the only way, and he stood it as well as suffering fat man could. Finally his end of the ladder was raised into the air and, balance, the lashings cut and he was hurried off to the hospital where, the doctors say, he will be laid up for about six weeks.

BOSTONIAN CHARGES RECORDS NEGLECTED

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Hubert W. Fowle of Boston has succeeded in stirring up a considerable row here over his letters to President Taft, Senator Crane and other notables protesting that certain "priceless documents are piled carelessly, one on top of the other, in some dark room in a room which is far from fireproof."

Some of the papers are the contention that Benjamin Franklin tried to present to George the Third, the original piece of the war of the Revolution, the war of 1812 or the war with Spain, and also the original of the emancipation proclamation, not to mention divers other documents. The officials do not think Mr. Fowle because they reason that he is acting from patriotic motives. They are considering the advisability of asking Congress at the next session to make an appropriation of probably $40,000 or $50,000 for the construction of a large vault in which these and other historic papers can be kept. Mr. Fowle, in some of his letters to public men, has indicated a willingness to contribute to raise $2,000 for the purpose of a file case that would ensure the safety of the documents in question. The State Department officials declare this sum would hardly buy one corner of the vault that alone would afford absolute protection against fire.

DOCTOR ROBBED NEAR THE STATE HOUSE

While walking about the State House for his "health" early today, Dr. James F. Frothingham of No. 11 Allston street, West Roxbury, was held up and robbed of a gold watch by two men, who escaped.

As Dr. Frothingham explains it, he was just taking his customary morning stroll in the grounds surrounding the State House when two men across the way, "rather rough looking characters." As they passed one of them lifted Dr. Frothingham's hat from his head. The physician remonstrated with the young man, who returned the hat with a laugh. Then he did so his pal snatched Dr. Frothingham's watch and fled.

He says that it is spreading rapidly along the gulf coast. In Galveston he found two boys afflicted with leprosy engaged in delivering meat and bread to patrons in the shops where they are employed.

MRS. LORETTA IRVING.

Mrs. Julia Caretta Irving, an actress, known on the stage as Pearl Irving, and Charles Henry Edwards, a city official of Newark, N. J., were married at the Bulfinch Place church today.

The bride was attended by her niece, Maude Alice Conley. Little Pearl Brenchley was flower girl. Dr. Timothy Gould Ing was best man. The bridal party and guests sat down to a wedding breakfast at the Revere House. Later on Mr. and Mrs. Edwards left for Worcester to be present at a reception given them by the bride's sister, Mrs. Mary Cahill, at No. 52 Harrison street. The bride was attired in a gown of white cluny lace over pink silk, with white picture hat. She carried lilies of the valley. Miss Conley, the bridesmaid, wore white cluny lace over pink silk and carried sweet peas.

From Worcester the couple will go on a honeymoon to New York and Atlantic city. On their return they will live on Indian lane, Chelton, in a new cottage which Mr. Edwards has given to the bride.

NOTED ARTIST VINTON, DEAD

Frederic Porter Vinton, the well-known portrait painter, is dead at his home, No. 22 Fayerweather street. He was a gold medalist at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1892 and in successive expositions in this country, and many of his portraits of noted Americans are among the prized paintings in public collections.

Mr. Vinton was born in Bangor, Me., sixty-five years ago, the son of William Henry and Sarah Ward (Goodhue) Vinton. He received his early education in the schools of Chicago. He came to Boston in 1862 and was employed as clerk and bookkeeper in business houses and banks until 1875.

In the meantime he had been studying art at the Lowell institute and art academy under Dr. William Rimmer. In 1875 he went abroad and entered the atelier of Leon Bonnat, Carolus Duran and Paul Laurens. He spent a year in the Royal Academy of Munich, and returned to Boston in 1878 to open a studio here.

In 1883 Mr. Vinton married at Newport Annie M. Plowe, daughter of George Plowe.

ELIOT TELLS EVILS OF COLLECTIVISM

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus, in a lecture at Harvard on the "Collectivists' Remedy," said: "Social service evils of today are the results of tremendous revolutions which have taken place in the great industries of the world. Industrial and political liberty have been produced and in turn have produced the inevitable result of liberty, freedom to do evil. Though there are enormous fortunes in this country, there is also astonishing distribution of property and collectivists have seen that where there is freedom there will be riches amassed in private hands. These rights of property are going to be supported by the growing intelligent agricultural population of the country."

SPECULATION IN LICENSES ENDS

Twenty or more liquor licensa "brokers" are put out of business by the action of the Boston Licensing Board in stopping speculation in liquor license papers, which for years have brought abnormal prices and have been the source of much profit. After August 1, the board announces, it will not consider any applications for the sale of these papers except for imperative reasons.

The authorities have discovered that some of those holding license papers are asking between $10,000 and $15,000 for them. At present there are about twenty license papers, the holders of which have not engaged in business or are willing to sell their rights to the highest bidder.

THIRD ELOPEMENT IN GAYNOR FAMILY

NEW YORK, May 20.—Gertrude Gaynor, the infant of Mayor Gaynor's children to elope within three years, is the happy bride of William Seward Webb, Jr., son of the New York millionaire, to whom she was married at Wilmington, Del., unknown to the Mayor. The only excuse for an elopement was the examples of her sister Edith, who eloped last June, and of her brother, Rufus W., who secretly married Marie Adolfi in 1908, and a desire on the part of Webb senior that his son wait a year or two before inking a bride.

Mr. Webb, Jr., was graduated from Yale in 1907. He is in the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co.

They donned their parts with such accuracy that Providence people thought sure that Hughes' famous MERRY COMEDIANS actually were leading embodiments.

MRS. TRAVERS, WHO BEFRIENDED LOST GERTRUDE QUIMBY

MRS. KATHLEEN TRAVERS

any real talent for the stage, except perhaps for toe dancing. She could and often did, in her childish way run all around my parlor on the tips of her feet.

"She came to me one day and borrowed a black suit of mine. This is the black suit in which she was dressed when she disappeared.

"She often told me she was going to run away and I tried to put the notion out of her head. I told her to try to content herself with her home life.

"Her grandmother, Francella E. Quimby, called on me and asked me to take care of the child. I often received letters from Mrs. Quimby to give Gertrude. One letter relates to the visit of Miss Burnett of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, brought by the grandmother.

This letter is as follows:

Tuesday morning.

Gertrude Dear: Have just been to see Miss Burnett. She told me you were ill home sick in bed. I came here but could not find no one. I will try one more time to write to me. I am wanting you. Come to see me if you are able, come to me this afternoon or evening. Come to No. 477 Massachusetts avenue. Do not fail to come, if possible. Love from F. E. Q.

Plea from Grandmother.

A letter to Mrs. Travers reads:

"Mrs. Travers—Will you please hand the enclosed letter into Gertrude's hands; and I hope she will come and explain to me why she went away. Gertrude's mother wrote to me to have me find a home for her. She must now go according to the laws of the city. I am sorry to have to trouble you, but all you may do for the lonely child will help good to you. I want to know if she is going to school and if she is well. You can read what I have written to Gertrude. For all and sakes we will hope for the right things to come in us all."

F. E. QUIMBY.

"Last Monday, the day that Gertrude disappeared, she was very excited. I think it was the last one to see her. About 4:30 in the afternoon she came to me. She had a suit case in her hand and my black suit on. She was almost hysterical, and told me she was going to do something desperate. I tried to comfort her, but she went down stairs crying, and that is the last time I saw her.

"I hope the child has not come to harm and that she will come back. She promised to write to me if she ever went away and I am grieved that she has not done so. If she sees this interview in the AMERICAN I hope she will write as I am very worried and anxious. I get to know her and to her for her winning, sweet, childish ways and I hope that she is found soon as I am very worried about her."

BRANDEIS BACK; UNDECIDED YET

Louis D. Brandeis returned to-day from Washington, still undecided whether he will serve as special counsel in the post-office investigation. He has not yet fully satisfied himself that his services in that capacity are needed although he has expressed himself as being glad to serve in the capacity of a public duty if convinced that his services were necessary. In Washington Mr. Brandeis held conferences with Mr. Ashbrook, chairman of the House Committee on Investigation.

Mr. Asabrook said that there was a desire on the part of the committee and of himself to have Mr. Brandeis conduct the investigation, and they would be very glad to have him come into the case. He denied that Mr. Brandeis had, as stated, written a letter to the committee or to him offering his services gratuitously.

Lewis Case Involved.

The committee held an executive session and discussed the subject of Mr. Brandeis becoming counsel for the committee.

As nearly as can be ascertained Mr. Brandeis was invited to consider entering the investigation by a person not on the committee and the purpose was to get his services to prosecute a thorough expose of the rulings and decisions of the Post-master General in the case of the E. G. Lewis Publishing Company of St. Louis, which for years had been having difficulty in the matter of sending its publications through the mails. Former Third Assistant Postmaster General E. C. Madden was asked by President Roosevelt to resign, because of a decision favorable to the Lewis concern. Since leaving the department, Mr. Madden has acted as a representative of the company and has published a book, defending its contentions.

Brandeis Studies Case.

A copy of this book and a statement of the various acts of the department toward the company have been filed with the committee of investigation and were examined by Mr. Brandeis. It is understood that the embarrassments of the situation lay in the fact that the Lewis Company would like to retain Mr. Brandeis to conduct the investigation, but the committee were averse to approving of having special counsel for a firm take charge of the investigation general.

LUMBER TRUST WAR IS OPENED

Members of the Massachusetts Retail Lumber Dealers' Association are emphatic in their denials that they had participated in any "unreasonable restraint of trade by combination with the other defendants named by Attorney-General Wickersham in the government's suit against the so-called Lumber Trust.

The suit is announced as the forerunner of others against combinations alleged to control prices and the trade in commodities with the purpose of forcing the retailer to maintain high prices in dealings with the consumer.

The Massachusetts men named as defendants are H. W. Sears of Middleboro, president of the Massachusetts Association; William B. Gaines of Greenfield; L. S. Williston, Holyoke; W. H. Sawyer, Worcester; M. L. Foster, Worcester; and E. N. Bagg, Springfield.

The suit alleges violations of the Sherman anti-trust law and asks a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from continuing the conspiracy charged.

150 Made Defendants.

Ten trade organizations and more than 150 individuals are made defendants before the United States Court in New York. The petition sets forth an elaborate system of blacklisting as a part of the alleged conspiracy and offers copies of circulars sent out by the various organizations in which consumers are classified as "proper" and "improper"; extracts from reports threatening "short shrift" to dealers who violate the rules and branding such offenders as "poachers," "scalpers," or "marauders."

It is alleged that not only have private consumers been blacklisted, but that many great industrial concerns have been put under the ban by the lumber dealers. Blacklisting is said to be under the following classifications:

Poacher—A retailer who competes for business in the territory of another; scalper, a retailer who sells at wholesale prices; maverick, one who sells wherever he can and to whomever he pleases.

"Blacklists Discontinued."

President H. W. Sears of the Massachusetts Association said:

"The Massachusetts Retail Lumber Dealers' Association discontinued the use of the so-called blacklists months ago. We have since declined to receive these papers or to send them out.

"We had found them of little value in our business and when we learned the government was investigating the matter we at once decided we did not want to continue any methods that were of the least questionable.

William B. Gaines of Greenfield said:

"We are affiliated with the Eastern Association in some ways, but not in the matter of those lists to which Attorney-General Wickersham takes exception.

The Massachusetts association has its headquarters in Worcester. Many Boston retail firms are allied with the association. According to E. B. Jones, president of the E. B. Jones Lumber Company of this city, and one time secretary and treasurer of the association, its purpose is protection.

"Against what?" he was asked.

"Dead beats—carpenters and others who buy lumber and do not pay for it."

FAMILY REUNITED AFTER TEN YEARS

BROCKTON, May 20.—After a separation of ten years, Mr. and Mrs. Carl O. Lindberg and four of their six children are reunited in a little cottage on Second street, Campello, where Mrs. Lindberg has lived many years. Ten years ago Mrs. Lindberg left her home near Stockholm to earn money in this country to bring her husband and family over. Last December she sent tickets for the husband and four children, but the latter contracted pneumonia from exposure, following a fire which destroyed his house and did not come. Three children came over.

Twelve of the father and son arrived from Sweden. Two sons were left in Sweden, but are expected to come to this country soon.

SWORD IN COURT CASE; CAPTAIN OF "OLD IRONSIDES"

COURT FIGHT FOR SCIMITAR

Miss Sarah Minns of Louisburg square, has filed a bill in equity to restrain Chester A. Reed of Dedham from disposing of a scimitar given to Captain John Percival of the frigate Constitution during the war of 1812 by a sultan of Zanzibar. The treasure has been handed down from generation to generation, sold and given away. The case is unique in the history of Massachusetts.

Captain Percival was in command of "Old Ironsides" and had performed great services for his country. On a visit to Zanzibar he received the sword as a gift.

At the time there was a rule in the navy no officer should accept a gift from a foreign country. Consequently the sword was given over to the custody of Captain Percival's private secretary, Benjamin Stevens, who was later president of a large insurance company in Boston.

The sword fell into the hands of Percival Gassett, a grandson by adoption of Captain Percival, a member of Roosevelt's famous Rough Riders, and at present United States consul at Jerez de la Frontera, Spain.

Previous to going to Spain, Mr. Gassett gave the scimitar to Attorney Chester A. Reed of Dedham, against whom the bill in equity was placed, for safe keeping.

Miss Minns says Captain Percival left the sword on the Constitution and it was kept by his secretary, Stevens. When Captain Percival died he left a will bequeathing the scimitar to a well-known Boston attorney of years ago, whose name does not appear. This lawyer died, and the sword was left to his wife. When she died, Charles H. Swan, another lawyer, settled up the estate and sold some of the property. It was at this time Miss Minns claims to have purchased the sword.

ERIE CANAL BREAKS; HOUSE CARRIED OFF

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 20.—A break in the Erie canal that will take a month to repair, occurred at Bushnell's Basin, about eight miles east of this city. The canal wall on the tow-path side where the break occurred is exceptionally high, and the rush of water following the break swept away an embankment forty feet in height and about 125 feet wide. A wing of a house in the path of the water was carried off, and a man in the house narrowly escaped injury, perhaps death.

BOSTONIANS TO LOSE $207,825

Two hundred and seven thousand, eight hundred and twenty-five dollars will probably be paid by Mrs. Maria A. Evans, widow of Robert D. Evans, and five other Bostonians because of an opinion handed down in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in favor of the Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York.

The trust company sued for balances due on stock subscriptions in the American Silk Company, as follows: Mrs. Maria A. Evans, $74,253; Albert S. Bigelow, $74,223; Stephen M. Weld, $37,111.07; Theophilus Parsons, $11,123.50; Russell S. Codman, $7422.33, and Dr. William M. Conant, $3711.17.

The defendants denied liability on the ground that the H. W. Bennett Company of New York, which was promoting the enterprise in connection with a syndicate, exceeded its authority in selling a lots for $843,030 from the Knickerbocker Trust Company. Their contention was sustained by the late Judge Lowell in the United States Circuit Court, but denied yesterday in the Court of Appeals.

The court held that despite the fact that the promoters exceeded the express authority given them in the underwriting agreement subscribed to by all purchasers of stock, their action did not affect the liability of the stockholders.

The case in Massachusetts was a test of the law on the subject of subscribers' liability, and it is understood that the trust company will now proceed to collect the balances on subscriptions in various parts of the country, thousands of wealthy investors having been induced to subscribe to the enterprise before it proved a failure.

The opinion of the Appellate Court sets aside the verdict of the lower court and sends the case back for a new trial in accordance with its findings.

This time it is the Viennese operetta, "The Kiss Waltz," which opens the Summer season at the Shubert tonight. It has been popular for two seasons in Vienna under the title of "The Love Waltz" and is expected to take rank with "The Merry Widow." The leading roles are taken by Davenport, Charles Purcell, Jessie Reussuiler Wheeler, Maud Lambert, Elsa Ryan, Edith Bradford, Charles Angelo, Edgar Atchison Ely, George Penacoste, Lew Fullerton, Oscar Schwartz, George Howard, Phil Hamilton, Olga Hempstone and Harry Lavelyn. Hoffmann, who stages all of the dramatic plays for the Shuberts, has conducted the rehearsals of "The Kiss Waltz," which have been in progress in New York for several weeks. William J. Wilson, the general stage director of the same firm, is responsible for the staging of the numbers.

2 WOMEN HURT IN AUTO PLUNGE

The condition of Mrs. Eliza Bugbee and her daughter, Dr. Emma S. Bridge, both of Brookline, who plunged over a forty-foot embankment in an automobile at Boscawen, N. H., turning two complete somersaults with the auto before landing in a brook, is critical, according to reports from the Margaret Pillsbury Hospital in Concord, N. H. Mrs. Bugbee is sixty-five years old and her condition is very serious, owing to a nervous shock and her advanced age.

John B. Bugbee, her husband, who is a lumber merchant and lives at No. 1463 Beacon street, is travelling in the West and every effort is being made by his friends here to get in communication with him. He has not yet heard of the accident.

Dangerous Curve in Road.

Mrs. Bugbee and her daughter, Dr. Emma S. Bridge, left Boston in a touring car, accompanied by Chauffeur W. Wheaton, for Sanbornton, N. H., where they were to be the guests of Colonel Arthur Pope, who has a summer home in the mountains. Colonel Pope and his wife started in front and ahead of the party that met with the accident, and not hearing anything of the party, feared trouble. They later heard of the accident and hurried to the aid of the injured women.

The accident happened near a small bridge in Boscawen on one of the most dangerous curves in the State of New Hampshire. Dr. Bridge was at the steering wheel and her chauffeur was on the front seat beside her. Her mother was on the rear seat. Everything had been going smoothly and the party was making fast time.

Two Somersaults by Auto.

The automobile passed safely over the bridge, but turned to the right instead of to the left as it crossed. This mistake caused the machine to plunge straight for the forty-foot embankment at the end of the bridge and at the end of the curve, which the correct turning would have taken, of Mrs. Bridge.

Chauffeur Wheaton attempted to control the steering gear, but was prevented by a post in the highway. As the heavy automobile headed straight for the brink of the deep gorge he leaped from the machine. He landed at the side of the road the way close to the edge of the embankment and escaped with a few scratches and bruises.

The big touring car, with Mrs. Bridge hanging desperately to the steering wheel and her mother sitting at the rear seat, plunged into space and, with the engine still running at full speed, turned over in complete somersaults in the forty-foot drop. Wheaton made his way down the embankment expecting to find both women dead. To his surprise they were both alive and conscious. The machine had made two complete turns in the air and had landed nearly right side up. It was a mass of wreckage.

FAILS TO PAY DEBT; LOSES POLICE JOB

Boston policemen must pay their debts, if they wish to continue in the service of the department, as a general order issued by Commissioner O'Meara, dismissing Patrolman George F. Reed of the Dudley Street Station, intimates. A trial board, consisting of Captains Peabody, Yeaton and Sullivan, held the finding after the charge of not paying his just debts and recommending that he be dismissed. The complaint was brought by James A. Quigley, Brookline, on April 15, for borrowing $250 on his note and gave as security a mortgage on some land in Waterboro, Me. After complaint had been made the Superintendent Pierce, he agreed to pay on instalments of $5 per week, but only one of the weeks. He refused to continue pay the $5, and after visiting the hospital a dreadful dunning, the charges were brought.

Licensing Board for the City of Boston May 19, 1911

To Holders of Liquor Licenses in the City of Boston and to Others Interested Therein

Because of the abnormal price of license papers (that is, the right to apply for a license), the Licensing Board for the City of Boston announces that during the balance of the license year no application for the sale of so-called license papers, except for death, bankruptcy or other imperative reasons will be considered by it after August 1, 1911.

Owing to the excessive number of changes in places already applied for and acted upon by the Board since May 1, 1911, licenses who have not applied and who desire to make changes in the interior arrangements of their licensed places are requested to make application and to file plans drawn to scale as early as possible and not later than July 1, 1911.

SECOND VICTIM OF AUTO DYING

Martin E. Simpson of No. 94 Crest ave., Beachmont, one of the seven men injured Thursday night when the auto-bus in which they were making a "joy" ride turned turtle on Main street, Winchester, is still unconscious at the Boston Hospital, Woburn, and physicians say his condition is critical. He is suffering from a fracture of the skull, severe scalp wounds and internal injuries.

Patrick J. McGarry of Myrtle street, Charlestown, a navy yard employe, is slightly improved. There have been short periods of consciousness and doctors think he may recover. His skull is fractured and the right foot is so badly crushed that a portion was amputated.

Walter J. Shea, who lives with his widowed mother at No. 302 Windsor street, Cambridgeport, has left the hospital and returned home.

In addition to McGarry and Simpson there are still at the hospital James Buchanan of No. 434 Revere street, Revere; Bartholomew Clancey of No. 7 Johnson street, Woburn, and John Linehan of No. 27 Varnum street, Boston, the chauffeur. The injuries of Bartholomew and Clancey are serious and both men will probably leave the hospital in a day or two.

Linehan has a fractured jaw, which was set by a Boston specialist. The injury will disfigure him for life. His head, face and body are covered with cuts and bruises, and some time will elapse before he will be able to return to work.

The body of Ambrose Warren of No. 26 Cumberland street, Boston, who died on the way to the hospital from a fractured skull and internal injuries, will be sent to the home of his father in Waterville, Me.

NEW "WHITE WAY" FOR CAMBRIDGE

Through the efforts of Mayor J. Edward Barry and some of the business men, the city of Cambridge is to have a "Great White Way." It will be located on Massachusetts avenue, between Lafayette square and Bigelow street. The residences now on the avenue between these points are to be remodelled and combined so that the street will be more modern in appearance. Only twenty-five additional lights will be installed, but Mayor Barry said it was a good idea and asked if the merchants would share one-half of the expense. They agreed.

BURNS FATAL TO SOMERVILLE BOY

Peter J. King, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter King of No. 1 Congress place, Somerville, who was so badly burned Thursday afternoon, is dead at the Somerville Hospital. Charges were made by the police at first that the child's clothing had been set afire by pinmates, but they are satisfied that the youngster was the victim of an accident. Mrs. King said her son received the burns while playing in the yard at the rear of his home. She believes that he got hold of some matches and, striking one, ignited his clothing.

Fine boneless are selling to-day for 25 cents each, and others for 20 cents a pound. The mackerel are caught in the South and brought here by rail. The weather is generally working northward, and it is expected that the vessels will be landing the catches at T Wharf early in June.

DAVIE DOES NOT FACE CREDITORS

Thirteen creditors of Robert E. Davie, the "boy broker," recently brought back from Brazil by the Boston police on charges of criminal bankruptcy, were represented at the hearing in the Tremont building before United States Referee in Bankruptcy Emery B. Childs and filed claims aggregating about $8,000.

The claims and the creditors are J. Reed Whipple, hotel bills at Young's and the Touraine, $52.50; New England Telephone Company, for calls, $202.10; George A. Fuller Co., Weeden building, $1,000; the United Manufacturing Company of New York, merchandise, $77; Rogers, Peet & Co., New York clothiers, who accepted a check from Davie for $80.20 on a Tennessee bank, which returned it marked "no funds"; Rose, Ames & Co., publishers of the Wall Street Journal, $12.50; State Street Exchange, C. E. Cating, for rent, $533.32; Charles P. Perkins & Co., cigars, $92.90; Joshua Marsh Company, merchandise, $11.25; F. J. Kelley of Somerville, attorney's note, $3,200; Attorney Allen G. Bullock, for Public Service service, $500; the Committee on Roads and Bridges, $500; attorney Charles F. Choate, services in organizing the Old Colony Construction Company, $100; Bodgman, Emmett & Co., of No. 25 State street, diamonds and jewelry, $450.50.

Davie is in Charles street Jail and to get him to the hearing his creditors had had to resort to habeas corpus proceedings. Attorney Winfield A. Towne, his counsel, said that while Davie is held under extradition proceedings his attendance could not be compelled. The creditors said they did not care about his coming. They elected Attorney Isadore Fox as trustee and he will try to find some Davie assets to levy on. It was finally decided to get hold of several automobiles, one of which is a Packard, now lately nothing belonging to the "boy broker" in sight.

MAYOR IN OPEN WAR WITH FOSS

salary increase apply only to elementary teachers, believing that all grades should be included.

Statement by Teachers.

The teachers' committee has issued a statement in which it is stated that the fight will be continued and that the Legislature will be asked to pass the bill over the veto. But the Mayor's statement is considered in political circles to be of vastly more significance as indication that unless the Governor yields there will be, from this time on, open warfare between them. The Mayor's statement says:

"I called on Governor Foss to urge him to sign the teachers' increase bill. I was surprised me very much by telling me that he was going to veto it. He gave me a letter from down East stating as the reason to the first that the act as passed by the Legislature restricted the amount of money to be raised for the increase to the elementary assistants.

"I told him that this was thoroughly understood by the Legislature and the Mayor's committee on finance, inasmuch as Lee himself framed the act requiring that four cents of the amount of money to be raised for school purposes be applied to physical education, and that those representing the school teachers had authorized their bill after this particular provision of the law. Mr. Foss objected, but should not count.

Praised Teachers' Fairness.

"I told the Governor that the school teachers had acted in the fairest possible manner, that their original bill called for an increase of 15 cents this year, 25 cents next year and 35 cents the year afterward, that this bill had received the strongest indorsement of the Boston newspapers, of the Committee on Cities and of the Legislature itself.

"When I told them that the financial condition of the city would not permit of this increase, they readily concurred in my point of view that no increase should be made this year, but that 10 cents be added in 1912 and 20 cents in 1913. I discussed the matter with the school committee, telling them that I would order the abatement of the water tax on school property so that the increase could begin the present year. And that I felt the teachers' bill should be supported because of the fairness which had characterized the attitude of the committee representing the teachers all through the negotiations.

"While the Governor may be right on his home rule point of view on general principles—that the increase is arbitrarily fixed by the Legislature, instead of being left to the discretion of the city, which has no other way for the teachers to fight their battle than the method adopted by them. The fact also that the School Committee itself had established a precedent in the policy of setting 4 cents aside for physical education by direct act of the Legislature cannot be lost sight of to offset this argument.

"Heavy Load for Democrats."

"The teachers have worked indefatigably for months and they are entitled to much credit for obtaining this legislation. It is my opinion, if the Governor vetoes the bill, that it will be carried over his veto, and I hope it will.

"While I was in the executive chamber I asked the Governor if the statement published in the newspapers, to the effect that he intended to veto the Court-house bill, was true, and he replied that it was. He said that the burden of these things that is going to be a pretty heavy load for the Democratic party to carry, and that he should be renominated."

Governor Foss held a long conference with Joseph Lee of the Boston School Committee and also received a letter from Corporation Counsel Herbert Parker, counsel for the school teachers, protesting against the proposed veto of the bill, and the striking out of the mandatory clause.

To Confer with Ellis.

This clause provides that the School committee shall appropriate 10 cents in 1912 and 20 cents each year thereafter to cover the increase in the salaries of assistant teachers, instead of leaving it to the discretion of the School Committee.

While it is known that Mr. Lee and the Governor, threshed out this phase of the bill, it is not known what action has been decided upon. That the Governor has not yet fully determined upon the course he will pursue is shown by the fact that he invited Chairman Ellis of the School Board to call upon him to talk over the situation.

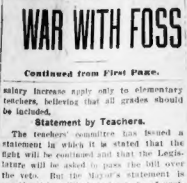
MARY ABDELHAD, BRIDE OF WEEK, WHO IS MISSING



MRS. MARY ABDELHAD

Mrs. Mary Abdelhad, a Syrian bride of one week, left her home beside her husband in a Washington street moving picture theatre Wednesday and has not been seen since. The police of the LaGrange street station have been appealed to but have as yet been unable to trace her. She is eighteen years of age and lived with her husband at No. 82 Hudson street, for which address she came from Worcester after the death of her mother. Prior to her marriage to Dhamri Abdelhad she was Miss Mary Salabiny. Her husband, who is employed at the Hotel Essex, has asked the police to search for the missing woman.

The young bride and her husband had been in the theatre but a short time when the wife handed her ring to her husband, saying that she was going to the dressing room to arrange her hair. She did not return and Abdelhad, thinking that she had returned home, left the theatre a'ter waiting for more than an hour. At the home he discovered that his bride had collected all her jewelry, including several valuable rings and had taken with her when they left earlier in the day.

CLOSE WORLD SHOW TO-NIGHT

With the forty-eighth production of the pageant of "Darkness and Light," the missionary exposition, "The World in Boston," closes to-night.

Eldon R. Keith, treasurer of the exposition, announced that the management expected to be able to pay all bills and return the full amount of the guaranty fund—$60,000. There will probably be no surplus for the Young People's Missionary Movement, which was to have benefited if there were profits.

GLIDDENITES COMING HERE

By J. C. KERRISON.

The contest committee of the American Automobile Association has seen fit to permit Worcester and Boston to be on the map as regards the Glidden tour. The date for the holding of the tour has been changed so that it will be possible for the tourists to reach Boston June 24 and remain in this city the following day, which is Sunday.

On Saturday the cars will start from Springfield, the home of the Stevens-Duryea, stopping at Worcester long enough to permit of the holding of the hill-climbing competitions and then head for Boston.

The Worcester Automobile Club is to entertain the tourists while they are in that city, while the Bay State Automobile Association will take good care of them on Sunday.

The Supreme Court has held that operation of an automobile without a license by a chauffeur does not render the latter a trespasser on the highway, although failure to register a machine would render all occupants of it trespassers.

Governor Foss is reported as saying that he believes that a far greater proportion of the expenses of the Highway commission could be met by increasing the cost of high-powered motor vehicles, since these expenses are kept at a high figure largely because of the excessive wear on the roads due to these vehicles.

In a measure the Governor is right, but the increased expense of the commission is, unquestionably, caused also in a measure by the increased number of cars on the roads, necessitating an increase in the office force; the increase in the number of miles of highways increasing the cost of maintenance somewhat, and to various other things that could be mentioned.

The automobile owners feel that, under the present system of licensing, they are contributing their fair share to the construction and maintenance of the State highways.

The Farm Club is now spending its annual outing at Camp Reynolds in Weld, Me. Chief Forester G. O. Reynolds and Assistant Chief Forester J. J. McNamara are acting the part of entertainment committee subject to the approval and permission of the Chief Farmer, two-time president, E. A. Gilmore.

The party is reported as having a splendid time and cares not about the business of the world until Tuesday, when once more some will take up newspaper work and others the edifying art of salesmanship and manufacturing lumber.

GIRL SINGER WINS AMATEUR NIGHT PRIZE

Sophie Bennett won first prize at the last amateur night performance of the season at the Columbia Theatre last night, her medley of "Songs My Mother Used to Sing" being especially pleasing. The Sheehan brothers, kid singers and dancers, were another good feature, and pulled down second money. Arthur Leland gave an illustration of how she played "The Daughter of the Regiment" on 81, and Edna Fay Cummings made goo-goo eyes at the boys while Peter Dooley was there with his grotesque singing and dancing stunts. It was a rattling wind-up to a particularly successful amateur season.

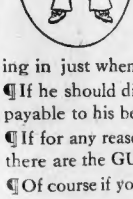
MRS. TAFT COMING TO BEVERLY SOON

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Mrs. Taft has so far recovered from her attack of nervous trouble that it will be unnecessary for her to go to Hot Springs, Va., or to leave the executive building at present, it remain in the White House, avoiding all social visits and seeing only a few close friends for a month. By that time she may be ready to go to Beverly.

THE BOY'S EDUCATION



¶Every father is mighty proud of that small boy of his. Many's the little luxury he denies himself for the lad's sake and his fondly cherished desire is to put him "through college."

¶It isn't easy for the man of moderate means to finance a college education, but the John Hancock can help him. A man age 25 can put approximately $67 a year aside for fifteen years in an endowment policy. At the end of that period he gets $1,000 cash, plus accumulated dividends, coming in just when it will be wanted to put the boy through college.

¶If he should die during the fifteen years, the fund is immediately payable to his beneficiary.

¶If for any reason he cannot keep up the payments on the policy, there are the GUARANTEED non-forfeiture values.

¶Of course if you are younger than 25 it will cost less; more if older.

¶All forms of policies to suit all purses.

Gray Hair

Wonderful Method—Your Hair Can Be Darkened and Kept So.

NO COMMON DYES

Gray hair is believed to most people to be evidence of weakening or physical and mental decline. Then think how much of vitality in the hair proves general feeling in strength.

Those who have gray hair and who most rely upon employers or others are often compelled to fight this prejudice. It is particularly hard for the man with gray hair to get the most from his own resources by business failure or necessitate changes and secure a new position.

Gray-Haired People Not Employed

The gray-haired person soon realizes that younger help are employed in preference to the aged, and he may know some thing selected who are really older than he.

Among women, the one who possesses hair of the least shade of gray is often compelled to give up her position, because of the fact that she is not as attractive as younger women. Gray hair, white or bleached meets with the richest favor.

Science has found a way to restore gray hair, and it is caused by a disorder of the pigmentary glands in the hair follicles. Science has found a preparation, meaning of many hats, using false hair of the desired shade, applied to cards for 7 days' use.

Dangerous, Nasty Dyes

Only those even afford gray hair who use dyes, because they contain poisonous ingredients. Science has restored the natural shade.

Science has found that the combined process makes it impossible to detect the application, even by experts as hair stains, dyes, drying rooms, etc. It would be impossible for one to tell that it was restored. These dyes deceive nobody except those who use them. Science has found a way that will positively assure what has been done. The hair has been merely restored to its natural color, and can be put off, usually discoloring the skin, clothing, pillows, etc

CONLEY HAS EYE ON TWO TITLES IN RING

By ED. W. SMITH.

CHICAGO, May 20.—Look out for Frankie Conley of Kenosha, Wis. He wants to corner the championship market. Yep, little Frankie is after a trust in titles. He wants to whip Johnny Coulon for the bantam honors and then he is going after the featherweights and clean 'em all up.

Frankie slipped through here on his way to New Orleans, and he said behind right there behind him was Brother Joe, with his suitcase and an expansive smile.

Notwithstanding all reports to the contrary, and some of them came from Frankie himself—Brother Joe is right there on the job. I asked Joe about this, and the smile became a positive illumination.

"Contract, you know, that's all," was the wise Indian boy's reply. "Just nice little document, not worth much in a court of law, it is said, but I'm to get nine per cent. and Frankie knows it. Howsh thicker than any water or anything else you can order."

Idleness Breeds Trouble.

"There's never any trouble between us excepting when we haven't anything else to do. Red thing to be idle; sure get people to quarreling.

"Say, before I forget it, just ask 'Pop' Conlon if I didn't meet the champion right after Johnny's Kenosha battle. He says he waited for us and our coach for a week thing, and we didn't show up.

"Why, I met 'Pop' and bought him a nice new hat, finest we could get in Kenosha, too, that is town from us on the New Orleans battle between Johnny and Frank.

He hasn't forgotten that, surely. It happened in the Park Hotel.

Stet. We met him, or rather I did. He didn't seem anxious to. He told me he would want everything first over there, and I said that would be all right, and that we would give him a side wager of $2,000, just to make it more interesting. Nothing doing, though.

"Pop's" mind must be on his garden and the next fight game.

"Don't you know that this battle in New Orleans May 28 with Joe Coster is for the featherweight championship of the world? Sure, that's right. Why, didn't Coster whip Attell. And didn't Frankie beat Abe at New Orleans? And wasn't Abe certified?

"Yes, it may be a bit unusual, but the title is advertised as the title, and the winner is going to claim it. The weight is to be 122 pounds at the ring side, and that's the true limit, all right.

"Retirement be hanged, you say? Well, that may be, but if Frankie beats Coster, and he will surely, I am going to post a forfeit of $1,000 in the East in support of a challenge to Abe Attell. Then if he doesn't fight we'll retire the title, and that will settle it, won't it?

Going After J. Coulon.

As Frank can still do 116 pounds, he will be open to meet Coulon or any of the others at that figure. We figure he will soon have that title back, for, like Battling Nelson, he only loaned it for a little while. Then Frank will be a double champion.

After delivering which Joe grabbed his offense and chased out of the door to catch a train for the sunny South.

FLYNN AFTER JACK JOHNSON

MILWAUKEE, May 20.—Pueblo Jim Flynn, conqueror of Al Kaufman, is taking the pugilistic game seriously now, and says it is the first time in his career as a glove wielder that he has done so. He looks good and says he never felt better.

"I have been in the habit of going along taking a fight here and there and training just enough to permit me to weather the storm," said Flynn. "But now it's different. I have been stirred to realize that I have some good fighting qualities and it has awakened in me an ambition to reach the top.

Would Box Johnson

"I think I can beat any of them, Johnson included, and if any promoter cares to stage such a bout they need not worry about my signing or about what sort of a showing I will make. I want to put any kind of a fight now and I am going to take the best care of myself. No more of this negligence in training for mine. I worked my hardest for the Kaufman bout, as you I was rewarded. On July 4 I fight Carl Morris, the Sapulpa hope. The matchmakers there have planned me the battle. Weighing around the 170 mark, as I do, Morris will be big for me. He showed away one hope, and I am sure this one is no tougher.

"Johnson is the lad I would like to get, but I suppose that it's a case of beat three or four other good men before the promoters will give me a chance. I have always been considered a contender of a real horse in the game. No more of this for me. When I sign to fight I am going to promise myself the best condition, and that is my way I am going into the ring. Jim Flynn has a future before him now and I am going to earn that future into the championship.

Says Al Was in Shape.

"I never dodged anybody and I never will. I have heard a lot of stories about Kaufman being out of shape when we fought. That is all bosh. Al was in the pink of condition and could have been better, but I caught him in the right spot at the right time and he was no good thereafter. I am ready to fight him again and show that my victory was no accident. Jim carries an air of confidence now that has been lacking in his makeup ever since the day he entered the game. He is confident and really believes he can trim Johnson.

B. A. A. MAY HAVE BOXING TOURNEY

The Boston Athletic Association has offered to have the international amateur boxing tournament, which was stopped by the police in New York, held here, and the offer will be accepted probably to-day.

The first preliminary bout last night was in the 115-pound class between William Shandler of the Boys' Club of this city and Sam Loving of Newark. Shandler stopped Loving in the opening round.

As soon as Referee Tim Hurst announced Shandler as the winner Police Captain Hayes stepped forward and declared that an officer, who was not a member of the club, had purchased a ticket and that the bouts were being held in violation of the law.

Eleven persons in all were arrested. The other prisoners included timekeepers and various other functionaries of the tournament. The promoters avowed doubtful if the bouts scheduled for to-night would be held in Madison Square Garden.

CHANCE IS BUILDING UP A NEW CLUB TEAM

By BILL BAILEY.

CHICAGO, May 20.—Behind the determination of Manager Chance to reorganize that Cub pitching staff there lies a purpose which is not revealed on the surface.

Maybe you have read the story of the one-horse shay.

It was built so that one part was as strong as the other. When it went it all went at once. And that's the way many great ball clubs have gone. In fact, it's been the case with almost every great ball club.

To begin with, the team was recruited from among youngsters. As they played together year after year they improved their team work. The men in the outfield and in the infield, the pitchers and the catchers, reached their zenith at about the same time. The team enjoyed a few years of greatness. Then it went to pieces, and it was necessary to begin with the recruits and build another such a team.

That's been the history of great ball clubs. They were irresistible when the men were at their best. As the men, being of the same age, having seen about the same years of service, went to the bad together, and there was but the wreck of the once mighty machine.

Well, Chance figures that he will change baseball history. He declares that he will not allow his team to go to pieces all at once, as did the one-horse shay. And that's the secret behind his determination to reorganizing his pitching staff.

You remember that old pitching staff the Cubs had when they were at their best in 1907?

There was Mordecai Brown and Ed Reulbach, Orval Overall and Jack Pfiester. You remember the pitching staff that faced the Athletics last year? Mordecai Brown was there, and Overall and Reulbach and Pfiester. But the pitching staff of 1907 was a wonder and the delight of the Cub fans. It moved down the Detroit batters as if they were weaklings, instead of strong men with the war-club.

And the pitching staff in the world series of 1910? A joke, a disappointment to the West Side fans, and one that gave the Athletics much pleasure.

Chance is trying to build up the machine a part at a time. Right now he is determined to get another pitching staff together. That is, one that will hold the opposition while the Cub batters hammer. Looks like he had the right idea.

The old one-horse shaw was a grand vehicle when it was in its prime. But it certainly was a sorry mess when it began to go. For then there was no rallying to build on. Perhaps the owners figured on getting a pleasure machine. But you can't buy those highly polished vehicles in baseball.

By R. W. LARDNER.

What will be the score to-day? That's the question bugs are asking about the Rustler game. They have a pretty good idea when team will win, if it doesn't rain. They are also mildly curious to know who will pitch.

To-day's defeat will make eleven straight. This statement is not destined to arouse the ire of the fans who have them still, with all their faults. But it makes the athletes themselves mad enough to eat and win, it will have served a great purpose.

Really this has been going on long enough. The ten games have been lost through a variety of causes—hard luck, bad pitching, loose fielding and even weak batting. It is up to the Rustlers to find remedies for these ailments. They can even help their luck along by playing some real ball. Let's not make it an even dozen. It is natural to feel a sort of pity for the Cardinals from St. Louis, who are go better than we are. But the Cards don't expect to have victories thrust upon them out of sympathy.

If Roger Bresnahan sends in a pitcher to-day who's nerdly as generous as Goode tried to be yesterday, it's up to Tenney's nose to forget the cruelty end of it and take as much advantage as they can. Two Rustlers are uncomfortable in the cellar and it's time they went upstairs. They can't make the journey in a day, but they can get the ball rolling, where they since the preserves.

St. Louis can boast of one great accomplishment. It's pitchers, two of them, reportedly held Boston to five hits. That's something to be proud of, the way the locals have been murdering the ball. It is to be hoped that the batting slump is only temporary, for there wouldn't be much hope for F. Tenney and Co. if weak hitting were added permanently to the other defects.

The Rustlers scored after two were out in the second. Butler and Rariden walked and Brown busted a double into left center. Arthur and Bill crossing the plate.

A million should have chalked up in the third, but it took some mighty nifty running on Bill Sweeney's part to get a single for Joe Miller walked. Sweeney hit to Golden, whose throw to Miller at second pulled Hughes off the bag. Ingerton then tried to sacrifice, but Golden pegged to third for Miller and was too late. Then here the sacks filled in some outs. Goode bounded to Hauser resulted in Miller's fleshes at the plate being fanned. Butler looked as if he would do likewise, for he had two strikes and one ball when Scrappy decided on radical action. He got a big lead off third while Golden was winding up and slid across the plate with a clean steal of home on Butler's second ball. Ingerton and Goode moved up on the play, and completed a triple steal. It was a great play. Golden took this chance, for Butler's fly to Ellis settled the side.

CHICAGO, May 20.—Manager Patsy Donovan is much cheered up over the showing of his crippled Red Sox in yesterday's league struggle against General Daffy's White Hose, and said last night that he expected to take at least one more and probably both of the remaining games of the series.

Donovan is planning to send Cicotte against the last meeting White Sox count to-day and expects the veteran to put another check on the upward march of Comiskey's men.

There is no denying the Red Sox are in far from their true form. One look at Ingerton's build in centre field is enough to show how much Tris Speaker is missed. Riggert seems unable to judge fly balls that are hit over his head and in the two games here has failed to do anything of note with the stick.

CY PERKINS HITS OUT A HOME RUN

Cy Perkins got a home run and a tremendous hand when he came to bat in the baseball game between teams of employes of B. F. Keith's Theatre played at the American League Grounds yesterday. The run contributed largely to the result, which was: White Sox, 24; Young Dutes, 12. But Joe Burke, who ordinarily makes his hits with the slide trombone in the orchestra, helped things along by two three-baggers. Billy Gleason, the electrician, made the circuit twice with a start of two singles. Bart F. Grady, who wields the baton in the orchestra, did no stick work, but only because they made him umpire. More than 100 employes of the playhouse gave a realistic performance as fans.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Pres. Lynch of the National league fined left fielder Magee, shortstop Doolan and second baseman Knabe of the Philadelphia baseball club $25 each for objecting to the decision of Umpire Doyle in yesterday's game with Chicago. Pres. Lynch went to Philadelphia to inquire further into the dispute.

SCHOOL STARS IN FAST MEET

The annual Harvard inter-scholastic games are held at the Harvard Stadium this afternoon and indications point to an enlightened. Nearly 300 entries have been received and all of the best school boy athletes will be in competition.

Boys from Worcester Academy, Andover, Exeter, Providence Technical High, Brookline High, Lawrence High, Boston English High, Noble and Greenough, Newton High, Rindge M. T. S., Mechanic Arts, Plymouth High, Dorchester High, Boston Latin and Lynn Classical will contest.

Worcester Academy is the logical favorite, but many expect Exeter to come strong. The Worcester school has a well balanced team and is strong in the runs and in the field events.

In the sprints a new face is likely to be seen in the finals. Drew of Springfield High school, did great work in the Yale Interscholastic last Saturday and he is in line to win this event to-day.

Drew also is figured in the 220-yard dash and the broad jump and will undoubtedly bring some points out to the Western part of the State. Cornell of Exeter, Cole of Worcester, Whitney of Noble and Greenough, and Creary and Cridwell of Andover, will also bear watching in the short dash.

Four Stars in 440.

The 440-yard run is likely to result in a good four-cornered battle between Capbles of Rindge, Brown of Exeter, Libby of Worcester and Whitney of Noble and Greenough. All are fast and the winner will be forced to his limit.

James Burke looks to be the best half-miler, but several boys are entered who will give the Worcester runner a lot of trouble before the race is over.

Howorth, also of Worcester, is entered in the mile run and he will have a merry battle with Stone of Brookline for the honors. Both boys are fast and about equally matched and the contest is one event that will be watched carefully. Allen of English High is good in the mile and should come in place.

Fight in Field Events.

Brookline High will likely turn out a winner to the low hurdles with Capper running in the second position. Martin of Andover, Hulbert and Rosner of Andover, Johnstone of Worcester and Sheiden of Brookline are all entered and the high jump and the event should be fast.

Worcester and Exeter will have a good fight in the field events. Johnstone of Worcester and McDougal of Exeter are likely to tie in the high jump, Worthington should win the broad jump, and Whitney should take the pole vault.

LOWELL GETS GOOD HITTER IN BARROWS

LOWELL, May 20.—Captain Roland Barrows, centre fielder of the Lowell Club until he temporarily ceased playing when the directors refused to grant the substitution board, has been bought by the Lowell managers from the Lincoln, Neb., club, to which he was sent by the Chicago White Sox.

Barrows did not care to play in Lincoln, but the club retained its right to reserve him until the arrangement made yesterday by Manager Gray of the Lowells. In the games in which he played against Barrows by his great hitting and fielding helped the Lincoln team to win. The second great value to the Lowells.

Barrows joins the team to-day.

SPECIAL BOUTS AT ARMORY A. A.

The Armory A. A. has arranged three special bouts for the amateur show next Friday night. The 115-pound bout will be Johnnie Coleman of South Boston and Yorke O'Connell of Charlestown; 145-pound class, Patsy Ingram, C. Y. M. A., and Joe Burke-Cox of Forest Hills. The 158-pound class, Eddie Dunn of Roxbury and Joe Burke-Cox of Forest Hills. The open classes, 125 and 135 pounds, will have about sixty entrants by Wednesday evening when the entries close.

SCHOOL SPRINTER LEAVES HIS STUDIES.

Chester J. Grenier, the High School of Commerce sprinter, who won the 60 yards dash at the Boston High School tournament last winter, has left school. He has decided to go into business.

AMATEUR BOUTS.

The three special bouts to be held in connection with the amateur boxing tournament at the Armory A. A. next Friday evening have been arranged and are as follows: Raymond Lipon, Y. Joe Cox-Burke in the heavyweight class; Petsy De Lacey v. Ed. Bennett in the 145-pound class, and Johnnie Coleman v. Yorke O'Connell in the 115-pound class. There will be three open classes at 105, 125 and 135 pounds.

SPRINGFIELD COLLEGE MEET

PRATT FIELD, SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 20.—With one of the best balanced teams ever sent out of Hanover in several seasons, Dartmouth goes into Pratt Field to-day an almost certain winner in the twenty-fifth annual track meet of the New England Intercollegiate Association.

Strong in the weight and field events the workers of the Green are certain to pull thirty points, which will give them the victory over the thirteen other colleges who are competing in the fourteen events on the program. In the preliminary events which have been held every Dartmouth man came up to the expectations of Coach Harry Hillman, with the exception of H. W. Smith, the star timber-topper, who was expected to secure a place in the high hurdles. In his heat he was forced to take third place, thus failing to qualify. In the low hurdles, however, Smith redeemed himself and secured a place, and will be the only Dartmouth man in the final event to-day.

Eleven preliminary events were run off yesterday and the Green will have at least one man in each of the events.

The real struggle of the meet seems to be for second and third place. Williams and Tech seem to be the logical candidates for these two positions, with the loss of Lincoln deciding which team will be the runner-up to Dartmouth. Both Williams and Tech will make the majority of their points in taking seconds, thirds and fourth places, as neither of these teams have any wonderful performers.

There are several likely looking candidates in the pole vault who may go back to their college with a new record to their credit. The most likely looking one is Rogers of the University of Maine, Captain Salsbury of Tech, Captain Holdman of Dartmouth and Mason and Wessels of Trinity are also in the pole vault who may walk off with the honors.

The most versatile athlete who appeared on the field yesterday was Captain Gutterson of the University of Vermont. First the Vermonter appeared in the 220-yard hurdles, and won his preliminary heat handily. The next appeared in the high jump, and was tied with the winners at the height of 5 feet 7 inches. His last appearance of the day was in the broad jump, and at the end of the preliminary trials he had the best jump of the day with a leap of 21 feet 8 3-5 inches.

Coach Harry Hillman says: "There is nothing in it but Dartmouth. With our strong and even-balanced team we will secure first in every point. We will especially single out for us. I look for the Green to be represented in every event in which we have men entered."

Frank Sandy, the well-known professional middle-distance runner and coach of the M. I. T. team, feels certain that his team will finish in second position. "We ought to land a number of second positions, and should get one or two firsts," said Coach Sandy. "I look to see Tech get our share of points in the mile run."

Several of the other colleges say they have dark horses who will make it hot for the Green in some of the events.

For best story of this event, see to-morrow's Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

MINISTERS PLAY BALL.

ST. LOUIS, May 20.—A baseball nine of Lutheran ministers here on the St. Louis for the convention of the Missouri synod played on the Marine grounds to-day against the Concordia Ministerial Seminary team. The score was 20 to 4 against the ministers. The ministers conversed in the vernacular and kicked at the umpire. Rev. Louis Goesswein made some cruel remarks at the expense of the umpire. "Cheese" Voss, because Voss couldn't see to play the way he wanted him to. Voss, who protested a batted ball had struck the umpire on the leg and that the runner was safe. The ministers crowded around the umpire, but Rev. Mr. Goesswein ordered them to go back to the bench.

"Don't you bother the poor fellow," he said. "He is a cripple. If he did not have a cripple for an excuse he could certainly have felt that ball strike it."

Harvard and Princeton play baseball at Harvard Stadium over in the wilds of Jersey this afternoon, this being the only game in which these two teams will meet this year. A great deal of interest in Cambridge could not be arranged for this season.

The Harvard team has pulled itself out of the slough into which it seemed to have fallen in the Strange struggle and is back in the good form which it exhibited the early part of the season.

Last year in the two contests played with the Tigers Harvard came out with the short end of the scores both times, the scores being 6 to 2 and 7 to 1. The Princeton team has a number of veterans back on the nine this year, and is especially strong in pitchers either one of the two named as choice for the opening twirling staff today being fail as good as any collegiate pitchers today.

Captain Bolton of Princeton has been nine Harvard did things to a week ago Saturday on Soldiers Field to the tune of four threouts every reason to believe that Harvard intends to annihilate the Jersey it has been showing during the greater part of the season, the defects of last year will be retrieved to-day.

Captain McLaughlin is slated for left field, but he is practically certain that he will go in the game. Dee Pinson does not care to take any chances with the Tigers on their home grounds, and Wheelsworth or Babson, probably the former, will take the left garden job.

MAY FORCE FOGEL OUT OF PHILADELPHIAS

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—The death of Horace Fogel, president of the Philadelphia National League team probably means the elimination of Horace Fogel, president of the Phillies, as a factor in baseball baseball. Since Fogel and Murphy gave up their places on the directors seat of the Philadelphia club it is generally acknowledged that Elliot and his millions were the sole backers of Fogel, and it was this combination which kept the former president in charge. Stockholders of the club at the last annual election voted overwhelmingly to be opposed to Fogel are endeavoring to get a line on the Elliot stock.

FRESHIES PLAY BALL ON SOLDIER'S FIELD

An exciting game is expected when Andover and the Harvard freshmen cross baseball clubs on the Soldier's Field diamond this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Both teams have excellent records to date. Andover having defeated Academy A. A. and Princeton freshmen 3 to 2, and suffering defeat at the hands of the Tigers 5 to 4. Smith and Reynolds will be the battery for the Andover team and will probably be in the box for the visitors.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

The Rustlers haven't beaten a Western team yet.

Roger Bresnahan cut up the grounds looking from his position to the pitcher's box to-day.

Cecil Ferguson was out in uniform. He is also careful not to do any galloping around, but he's getting into shape for all that.

George Tyler pitched the last inning for the Rustlers and distinguished himself by it. That's one of the best things they do.

Hugo Perdue intends to have his right arm examined by a surgeon to know the nature of the disturbance going on in the elbow joint of that limb.

The boys thought Rariden would die it up in the eighth. Goode singled and Tenney walked. Bresnahan then yanked Golden and sent in Rariden. Pinch hitting for Rariden filled the bases, but Clarke, batting for Brown, forced Goode at the plate, and Berger grounded to Hughes.

Collins was put on to run for Tenney in the eighth. Collins is left fielding this road round and Ingerton, the most versatile of our athletes, covered first base. He didn't have a chance in that position.

There were only two extra base hits made, a wonderful record for this park. However, there were stolen bases enough to make up for it.

Two Suburban League battles are on the card for this afternoon with Somerville High meeting Melrose High on Broadway Field, and Medford High batting Malden High in their second game at Medford.

A good game is expected at Somerville, although the Red and Blue went down to defeat at Wakefield last week at the hands of Everett High. Coach Tift has had his men at work during the past two days and he says that his men can come back. Laurie will take the mound and he is confident that he can hold his opponents.

Melrose High is leading the league, but they will have to win to-day in order to retain it. Malden High will do the work and should be in condition to set up another list on strikeouts, for he has been pitching up fine form.

Malden High and Medford High should have a battle royal at Medford. This is the second time that these rivals have met this season and Malden has been the team to be able to subdue Medford. Joe Fahey and Ed Bolger have been opposing pitchers and a pitching battle is anticipated.

Brookline High will cross bats with Dorchester and a good game is expected. Brookline has been playing fine ball this season these two teams. Brennan has doing good work for the Dorchester team and he is in line to pitch. Many good school games will be played with Boston teams in the line-up.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

She Plays Nurse and Finds the Doctor Has Soulful Eyes.

DAYSEY MAYME APPLETON displayed no interest in the illness of her father until she discovered that his physician was young, unmarried and had soulful eyes.

She was in the sick room the next time he called, wearing a nurse's uniform, made by using the bolster pillow cover for a bobbie skirt, and a handkerchief twisted into a cap.

Attached to her belt with chains were a lot of sick room requisites, worn in the manner girls wear hardware implements on the street.

There was a lot of antiseptic gauze, a bottle of smelling salts, a thermometer and a hot water bag; and when she made the entry that the physician was also a man she added a feather duster and "just dote on operations," she said to him one day. "I believe surgery will cure anything, and, back in my home town, I held the record for being cut up.

"Why, when I had the measles I didn't take medicine, as women made of weaker stuff would do; I kept abreast with progress, went bravely to the operating table and had all the spots cut out."

"We could awaken greater interest in the doctor," she said to her mother one day. "If something could be found in father that has to be cut out."

She began to look at her father so coldly and critically that he was frightened into a delirium, and for three days and nights raved that he had become a plate of gilt lets.

A Successful Wife

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

ESTHER CAREY, a poor girl, whose father died when she was fifteen, and whose mother died soon after, leaving her with the care of five younger children, determines to face the world bravely, earn her own way and support the little family. They lived in Bracketsville, a New Jersey suburb of the great metropolis of New York.

She begins life as a stenographer in Wall street at $5 a week and later secures a place as amanuensis for Mrs. William Falsworth in a Fifth avenue mansion. Falsworth, whose wife is a dull-like woman who does not understand him, falls in love with Esther. He gives her all the work of his firm and with this and the work of other big patrons she is enabled to organize her own office on the tenth floor of a Wall street skyscraper.

Where a few years before she was earning $5 a week, she now employs four assistants and clears $2,000 a year.

Senator Bellars, one of her patrons, has her dictate a letter to a nephew of his, Stephen Kirkland, in Paris asking him to give up his art studies and come to New York. The Senator believes his nephew is "going to the devil" in Europe.

Kirkland comes to New York and, like Falsworth, falls in love with Esther. She refuses Falsworth's offer to elope and he leaves her for the West. While he is away Kirkland calls daily to have dictation work done, and one Sunday afternoon visits Esther at her home in Bracketsville. While he is seated on the piazza, Esther is amazed to see Falsworth coming up the road from the station.

Despite her efforts, the two men meet face to face and Falsworth openly insults Kirkland. When the latter leaves, Falsworth says: "Esther, that man must not come here again."

He tells her Kirkland is not fit for any good woman to associate with. He is enraged at the thought that Stephen is free to marry Esther, while he is tied to a doll." He again asks her to flee with him. She refuses and Falsworth leaves again for the West. Kirkland calls one day, soon after, and takes Esther for a long walk to Central Park. She knows after that stroll that he is desperate in his love for her.

Falsworth again urges her to go away with him, and she finally promises to do so in less than a week. But when the time comes she does not do so, and Falsworth comes to her office and tries to persuade her to go with him, but in vain. They are interrupted by Kirkland and Falsworth leaves in anger.

In August, Esther takes her brother Tommy and goes to a place in the Catskills. Kirkland comes to see her. He takes a room at an hotel and stays all that fall. Tommy is sick and Esther makes him give up his place.

Tommy's Good-by

IT was a long Winter. It seemed as though the storms would never let up and that Spring would never come. Tommy took to his bed and grew weaker every day. I went in to business regularly, and Fanny as well. The girl gave him all the care he needed. It wasn't much until the last. He was crazy about the things and books that Mr. Kirkland brought him. Mr. Kirkland came every evening and sat with us. When Tommy was able we sat up-stairs with him. Toward Spring I only went to town the days Fanny was easter. Fanny stayed home, too, sometimes, but she was young and had a trick of humming tunes that made Tommy nervous, and though she tried hard she couldn't break the habit. Fanny was very pretty and had lots of calls and friends. She spent all her salary, outside of board money, for her clothes, but it paid to dress her. After the first of April Tommy didn't pretend to sit up any more, and I remember getting out of bed early one morning with such a feeling of hurry—hurry on me. I dressed and went into my brother's room. It was only 8 o'clock, but he had got hold of the girl and made her fix him up, and was sitting up in bed. He looked fine. His hair was brushed back and his eyes were quite bright.

"Say, sis, you can go in town to-day, all right. I'm feeling great. I guess I'll be up this week sure, if the weather keeps along."

It was warmer and he had the windows open. One tree near the house was covered with apple blossoms.

I hadn't been in to town for a week, and the girls needed me. Things were every which way and they were telephoning me until I was nearly crazy; so I thought he was lots better and that I would run in for an hour. When I came to say good-by to Tommy he was looking fine still. He was only sixteen. He had a little flannel jacket that I had made him, and his looked like a girl, with his pink cheeks and his smooth hair.

"Mr. Kirk's staying up to-day," Tommy said. "He is coming to shew me how to draw a picture."

He had given Tom a big box of colors, and it seemed to me that perhaps, after all, Tom might really take a pull for the better and get well.

All the way to town I felt the hurry. I couldn't get through fast enough in the office. There was a mountain of work and directions to give, and I saw if I didn't come back to business soon there would be trouble. But I ate a bit of lunch and hurried home at 4 o'clock.

Senator Bellars passed me in the hall. I expected he would bow, but he didn't. I was surprised, but I was hurrying so fast that I didn't have time to notice or mind then. The ferryboat waited in her slip so long I got wild. The train was late, and I could have screamed. At the station I took a hack and made Mr. Beam hurry—hurry. When I got to the house there was no sign of anybody. The girl met me on the stairs.

"Oh, Miss Esther, hurry—hurry." And I ran up.

Mr. Kirkland was sitting on Tommy's bed. He had the boy in his arms. I went around to the other side, and we held him together.

I whispered across, "Where's the doctor?"

"He's just gone out into the back-country to a confinement case. He's been here and gone." Then he said aloud, "We don't need anybody, do we, old man?"

Tommy hadn't been able to speak very well for a long time. His voice had been hoarse for months, and it was because he had spoken out so well that morning and had seemed so strong that I had taken courage for him.

"Hold me up," he managed to say to Mr. Kirkland, "that's all. Hold—me—high —up."

A Good Judge of Men

WHEN Carnegie had just begun to lay the foundation of prosperity, an overseer came to him with a very long face.

"The smartest man in my department says he's going to quit," he said. "I wish you'd see him, sir, and raise his salary. We simply can't do without him."

"If he died to-morrow, then," snorted Carnegie, "the works would be held up, would they? You couldn't fill the gap yourself?"

"No, sir; he's a very skilled workman."

"H'm! Send him to me!"

Always a judge of men, Andrew cast a quick look at the indispensable one, and said:

"Say, supposing my overseer here died suddenly to-day, would you be able to fill his shoes?"

Without hesitation, the man replied: "Easy."

"Well, then," said Carnegie, "you needn't wait until he dies. Take his job now. He's fired!"

What has become of the dirt?

That's the first question you ask when you rinse out the clothes after they've been soaped with Fels-Naptha and soaked in cool or lukewarm water.

The clothes are white and clean.

The dirt's gone.

What became of it?

Here's the answer.

Fels-Naptha Soap acts on dirt like water does sugar; dissolves it; separates it into tiny particles that are carried away by the rinsing water.

Fels-Naptha Soap takes the place of boiling.

Makes the clothes whiter and cleaner without it.

Dirt doesn't need to be rubbed out when it's dissolved.

Do you wonder that women who use Fels-Naptha Soap in Winter or Summer are able to do their washing in one-half the time with one-fourth the work required by the old way?

When you try it yourself, follow directions printed on the red and green wrapper.

Desperate Desmond

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

As you see, the villain has gotten possession of an aeroplane and is chasing Claude and Rosamond through the circumambient atmosphere. The one has the stage beauchamp, the wild man of Borneo, with him, and as soon as they get close enough he is going to order them to eat bacon with their spears and put the kibosh on our hero's machine.

And, believe us, dear reader, those wild, untutored cut-throats are only too glad to do the scoundrel's bidding. Not that they have any particular grudge against Claude or Rosamond, but they love bloodshed for its own sake. Don't judge them too harsh!—they were brought up that way. But Desperate Desmond ought to know better.

In spite of his suppleness of knowledge of the refinements of civilization, the villain gives the word for his gang to let fly their spears, which they promptly do. And you won't remember that these guys are expert marksmen and seldom miss what they are shooting at. It won't take more than two or three of those spears to put Claude's machine out of the blink.

But what is this huge shape that suddenly interposes itself between the wild men and their intended victim? You know as well as we do that it it a balloon. Bang! Just like that. And anybody who happens to be in the immediate vicinity is liable to be barred some. Desmond and his wild men were not expecting anything like this, you may be sure. If they had, they would have made as fine and quite different arrangements.

You know what happens when you stick a spear into a balloon. Bang! Just like that. And anybody who happens to be in the immediate vicinity is liable to be barred some. Desmond and his wild men were not expecting anything like this, you may be sure. If they had, they would have made as fine and quite different arrangements.

Being taken completely by surprise, the only thing for the villain and his crew to do is to dive overboard. We wish we could have had some sharp, jagged rocks for them to light on, but, as a matter of fact, there's nothing below but water. Even at that, we hope Claude will get them in Sunday's pictures. Just you wait and see.

Hereafter Desperate Desmond's thrilling adventures will be a regular feature of Sunday AMERICAN. Don't miss the wonderful deeds of Claude Eolaire and his Rosamond and their persistent foe, Desperate Desmond, in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Says Stronger Sex Is Woman

By DOROTHY DIX

PROFESSOR DUDLEY SARGENT, Harvard's gymnastic expert, and a well-known writer on matters pertaining to women's development, asserts that woman is, in reality, a great, big, rough, brutal savage instead of the frail flower that she is popularly supposed to be.

Professor Sargent declared that woman isn't the weaker vessel, but the stronger, and that she is made of tougher material than man. He asserts that she can undergo many strains that a man cannot, and that when it comes to a case of withstanding cold, hunger or thirst, or any physical privation, a woman will outlast a man in nine cases out of ten.

The professor isn't talking about the tall, large Amazonian athletic college girl, either. He is speaking of just the plain, ordinary, common or garden variety of woman; and he is dead right in saying that she's got more staying powers than the ordinary man, and that if the average man did half the things in a day that the average woman does, it would kill him.

Worse Than the Steel Mills

To begin with, no man can stand up under as many hours' work a day as the ordinary woman does. It has been asserted that the men who work from twelve to fourteen hours a day in the steel mills are old men at forty, but every mother of a family, in moderate circumstances, works from sixteen to eighteen hours a day and is still young at sixty.

Nobody appoints a commission to look into her case. Nobody passes any laws to shorten her hours of labor, or relieves the strain under which she lives, because everybody is perfectly sure that she's amply able to bear the burden that has been laid upon her shoulders.

Nobody thinks of a woman being overworked who does the cooking, washing, and sewing, and mending, and baby tending for her family. Nobody thinks it's any hardship for her to get up an hour before her husband in the morning to get his breakfast, and to sit up an hour after he has gone to bed, patching his trousers, or ironing him a clean shirt, or to get up a dozen times in the night to give the baby a drink; and see that the other children are covered up; for the woman is splendidly equal to doing all of this never-ending labor.

But no mere man would be able to follow any occupation that got him up so early in the morning and kept him up so late at night, and had him on the jump in between times, and that broke in upon his rest and required him to get what sleep he had in fitful snatches. He would have a nervous breakdown inside of a week.

And there's no use in saying that woman's work in the home is a light and easy occupation. Any man who tries to take care of the baby and keep the other children occupied for a single Sunday afternoon, while his wife goes to visit her mother, will admit that four or five hours of it frazzles him out worse than a week at the office, or pile driving.

Beat Sandow or Jeffries

Observe also how much stronger is the female constitution than the male.

Why, any little frail, ninety-pound girl can do things without turning a hair that would be the death of Sandow or Jeffries.

No man could strip all of his pounds in the middle of Winter and sally gayly forth to the opera or a ball with no protection over the upper part of his body, except a string of pearls, without having pneumonia. It takes a woman to stand severe exposure like that without even getting a bad cold.

Nor would any man have the strength to do a lick of work if he was clothed as women are. Take the huskiest prizefighter and pin on his back three pounds of puffs, with forty-seven hatpins separately and individually digging into his scalp. Lace on him a straight front that feels like the case of iron and cuts off most of his breathing space. Perch him up on stilt-like heels that make every step a torture and put on him garments that eat, rabbi and confine at every point and then send him forth to labor.

The result would be that he would be brought home by some in an ambulance, after having been picked up in a swooning state at his desk. But myriads of women, similarly garbed, stand all day long behind counters, or work at typewriters without ever a murmur of protest passing their heroic lips.

Consider, also, the different ways in which men and women endure pain. There are tens of thousands of women who never draw a well breath, who are continual martyrs, year after year, to suffering, yet who go about their daily work without making a complaint, or even taking advantage of the medical skill that might possibly cure them.

"Mamma's headache," "My wife's nerves," "Mary's insomnia," become as much a matter of course that nobody pays any attention to them, and the poor victim even gets to be apologetic about her sufferings.

But, my, it's a different story when little papa's head that aches, or hubby's nerves that are out of tune, or John can't sleep. Then there are doctors and trained nurses and sanitariums and everybody in the family is expected to be up and doing, because men can't stand pain.

It takes a woman to grit her teeth and smile while she is enduring agony.

At any rate, Professor Sargent's theory knocks the props out from under the anti-suffragettes, who contend that only physical strength should rule the world. If women are, indeed, the stronger sex, then there is no further reason for withholding the ballot from them.

The De Bercy Affair

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS

MADEMOISELLE DE BERCY, a favorite of the stage, who came to London recently from her triumphs in Paris and never way into the best circles in the fashionable West End, is found shockingly murdered in her handsome apartments at the Feldsham Mansions.

Rupert Osborne, a rich young American, who was to have married her, is believed by the police to be my murderer. Chief Inspector Winter, of Scotland Yard, however, believes him innocent. Detective Clarke finds a taxicab driver who admits driving a man closely resembling Osborne to the woman's apartment ten minutes before the murder. Osborne, however, establishes an alibi.

It was found that Miss De Bercy was in reality Mirabel Armand, the daughter of a Jersey peasant. She was killed by a thrust through the right eye with a dagger-like weapon, and a problematic axe-head stolen from a museum was used to mutilate her face.

Furneaux, the shrewdest detective in Scotland Yard, is strangely agitated when detailed to take charge of the case. He admits he knew Miss De Bercy in Jersey years ago. Inspector Winter is puzzled by his subordinate's manner and resolves to watch him.

Osborne is warned by the police to hide himself in Tormouth, a seaside village. There, through a strange accident, he meets a young woman who is destined to play a remarkable part in the story.

Clarke has arrested two Anarchists, Eanon and Eichmann. It is said that De Bercy was a member of an Anarchist society.

The young woman Osborne meets at Tormouth is painting by the sea. Osborne falls from a bluff nearby and lands at her feet. He and she are both apparently surprised and an acquaintanceship springs up which results in an agreement to see each other again.

Furneaux goes to Osborne's apartment, where he finds Hylda Prout, Osborne's housekeeper, who tries to get rid of her employer's wife, and inspects Osborne's museum, where there are many curiosities, including a number of stone axe-heads, and one is missing. Directed by Miss Prout's finger, Furneaux discovers a vacant place in the rack of knives and daggers. The girl evidently cries that Osborne is innocent, and Furneaux becomes convinced that she loves her employer.

"She loves him," is Furneaux's thought.

From Miss Prout Furneaux learns that Osborne's housekeeper knew Miss De Bercy when she was a child. Furneaux questions Osborne's valet, Jeffries, and learns that his master had been there before, on the day of the murder.

At an Anarchist club a big Russian quarrels with Gaston Janoc, during which he picks Janoc's pockets of his papers. Then he goes away he is followed by a Frenchman, who snatches from him a paper he is examining under a street lamp. The Russian turns out to be Clarke in disguise, and the Frenchman to be Furneaux. The paper proves to be a letter from Osborne, addressed to Clarke himself.

Clarke and Furneaux

CLARKE flushed hotly under the paint, being conscious that he was investigating the case on his own private account and in a secret way. As a matter of fact, he was by this time fully convinced that Rose de Bercy's murder was the work of Anarchists, but he was no vexed with Furneaux's tricking him, and so fearful of official reprimand from Winter that he only answered:

"Why Janoc should think that I am interested, I can't imagine. It beats me."

"And how can Janoc know where Osborne is, or his assumed name, to write to him?" muttered Furneaux. "I thought that that was a secret between Osborne, Winter and myself."

Clarke, equally puzzled, scratched his head under his wig, which had been insufferably hot in that stifling room.

"Janoc and his crew must be keeping an eye on Osborne, it seems—for some reason," he exclaimed. "Heaven knows why—I don't. I am out of the De Bercy case, of course. My interest in the Janoc crowd is—political."

Laugh Sounded Bitter

"Let me see the letter again," said Furneaux, and he read it through twice. Then he opened the sheet, as if seeking additional information from the blank pages, turned it over, looked at the back—and there at the back he saw something else that was astounding, for, written backwards in the bottom of the page, in Osborne's handwriting, was the word "Rosalind."

"Who is Rosalind?" asked Furneaux—"some fancy name, I'm impressed from some other letter written at the same time."

"Don't know, I'm sure," said Clarke. "A sister, perhaps."

"A sister. Why, though, should his sister's name appear at the back of a note written to Janoc, or to Inspector Clarke as he thought?" said Furneaux to himself, in deep meditation. He suddenly added brightly: "Now, Clarke, there's a puzzle for you!"

"I don't see it, see any puzzle, I mean. It might have appeared on any other letter, or any to his bankers, or to a friend. It was a mere accident. There is nothing in that."

"Quite right," grinned Furneaux. "And it was a sister's name, of course. 'Rosalind.' A pretty name. Poor girl she will be anxious about her fond and doting brother."

"It may be another woman's name," said Clarke sagely—"though, for that matter, he'd hardly be on with a new love before the other one is cold in her grave, as the saying is."

Furneaux laughed a low, mysterious laugh in his throat. It had a peculiar sound, and one that set Clarke's nerves on fire of the other.

"I'll keep this, if you don't mind," he said, slipping into the envelope.

Meantime, Furneaux knew that there were other papers on Janoc's in Clarke's pocket, and he fingered a little to give his colleague a chance of exhibiting them. Clarke made no move, however, so he put out his hand, saying: "Well, good luck," and disturbed southward, while Clarke walked northward toward his residence, Hampstead way. But in Southampton row an overwhelming impatience to see the other Janoc papers overcame him, and he commenced to examine them as he went.

Two were bills. A third was a newspaper cutting from the Matin commenting on the murder in Feldsham Mansions. The fourth had proven to arrest Clarke's steps. It was a letter of three closely-written pages—in French, and though Clarke's French, self-taught, was not fluent, it could walk, if it could not fly. In ten minutes he had read and understood.

St. Petersburg says that since the secret meeting, a steady growth of courage in the rank and file is observable as far as the Nevski funds, an individual highly placed, whose name is in three syllables, said to be willing to come to the rescue. Lastly, as to the traitress, you will see to it that she to whose hands vengeance has been intrusted shall fall on the 3rd.

This was in the letter, and as Inspector Clarke's eyes fell on the date, "the 3rd," the clenched hand rose triumphantly in the air. It was on July the 3rd that Rose de Bercy had been done to death.

When Clarke again walked among his eyes were alight with a wild exultation. He was thinking:

"Now, Allah be praised, that I didn't show Furneaux this thing, as I nearly was doing!"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NO HARM IN IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of twenty-three and in business for myself, which I can leave but once a week—on Sunday evening.

Now, Miss Fairfax, I have no close friends with whom I might pass an enjoyable evening, and so I ask you whether it is proper for a young lady to go to the theatre alone, and if it would be considered vulgar?

M. C.

MY dear girl, it is too bad that you are obliged to take your recreation by yourself, but there is certainly no harm in your going to the theatre alone.

If you always appear ladylike and preserve a dignified bearing you will never have any trouble.

But do try to make some girl friends, with whom you can go, for, at your age, you should have the happiness of being with young people as often as you have time.

IT IS NOT FAIR

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been very much in love with a gentleman for the last two years. He tells me he thinks the same of me—but there is another young lady he speaks to whenever he can get the chance, and he also lends her books. This quite puts a very angry.

Now, Miss Fairfax, will you please tell me if I ought to give this gentleman up or what I should do? I am heartbroken by his actions. LILY.

IT is not fair for him to pay serious attention to two girls at the same time.

Explain to him the uncomfortable situation in which he has placed you and try to find out if he really likes you.

Perhaps you will succeed, but if you are not certain of his love, and I would not, it is quite idle for you to continue in the manner you describe.

How to Make Yourself Young Again.

William Muldoon, foremost physical trainer in America, tells how to restore vitality and regain health in Sunday's AMERICAN.

SPRING HUMOR

"We're having a mighty bad Spring for wheat. They won't be no crop."

"Gosh! Don't it hurt yer conscience to make such a perjurer?"

"Well, it does go against th' grain."

TWO PHOTOS OF MARJORIE HAMILTON, THE FAMOUS "CALENDAR GIRL," SHOWING HER REDUCTION OF 37 LBS. IN FIVE WEEKS.

Marjorie Hamilton, known throughout America as the famous "Calendar Girl," is now recognized as the greatest known expert in the art of fat reducing, and she practices only simple, natural methods in reducing double chin and excess fat.

She is acknowledged as the highest-priced exclusive photographic model for art calendars in America, demanding one hundred dollars per hour from noted "Calendar Houses" for her time. Realizing that an abundance of superfluous flesh would no longer keep her in the mid demand by photographic artists, she set about to reduce her increasing weight by a marvelously simple method of her own.

No drugs or harmful massaging; no sweating; no painful physical culture exercises; no starvation diet, and none of the old, ridiculous methods are used in her splendid new treatment.

The free book of this Queen of Beauty explains to men and women how by her natural, harmless treatment they may reduce pounds of weight at the rate of one pound or more daily. How any man or woman may reduce double chin quickly and regain new health and vigor.

Our readers will be astonished to learn for the first time of a really new, scientific method of FAT REDUCTION, as referred to in this splendid book, and now offered free as an advertisement to our readers for a short time.

You will be amazed to know how rapidly you may reduce your double chin and excess fat in a few days by following her simple directions. All fat men and women who desire to make themselves more attractive should secure this wonderful book at once and improve their figures quickly by her methods.

This book is written in a fascinating style, and explains how this famous photographic model, who is the raring "Calendar Girl" of the present time, reduced her own form of THIRTY-SEVEN POUNDS IN FIVE WEEKS by purely natural methods, and that without resorting to drugs, starvation diet, unnatural stuff to rub on the body, or harmful exercises.

Write for the book at once and learn the anguish she felt when her girlish figure started to develop abnormal proportions. Read of the terrors she felt when the dreaded fat made her realize she must give up her position or else submit to obesity.

Learn how she experimented and with determination and grit conquered fat; learn of these things so you may improve your own form and destroy your fat so it will not be longer necessary for you to subject yourself to the awful dangers of excessive flesh.

Miss Hamilton's health was at one time miserable on account of burdensome flesh, which had developed rapidly. She was weak and tired all the time; unable to sleep nights or digest her food; she repeatedly used all kinds of fat reducing treatments and methods of flesh reduction known to medical science. Violent exercises, quickly, You should quickly banish your starvation diets and worthless drugs, also excessive stuff to rub on her body, were all of no benefit. So, realizing that if she desired to longer continue as the star in her profession, and be longer sought after by art calendar artists of Europe and America, she must do something quick to prevent the enemy fat from spoiling her beauty, she studied on an entirely original and different plan, and after a remarkably short time, and adds to the strength and health of the individual with every pound taken off. Miss Hamilton also owes a great study of the system employed by the Japanese, who remain through life slender and vigorous, and it is said she has a treatment similar to theirs.

This woman's remarkable success has amazed her friends, who stand aghast to astonishment, marveling at this young woman's wondrous skill. Her method is so simple, yet it is looked upon with curiosity and admiration. By this system any person may reduce their flesh in the privacy of their own homes without medical assistance, at the rate of one pound or more daily.

With her marvelous methods before you, any man or woman should make a wonderful improvement in his or her appearance within a few days, and regain that graceful form which all beautiful women possess.

Write in, regarding the wonderful results of her new process for banishing fat.

Mrs. H., of California, writes in and says:

"The first week after using your treatment and new system, I knew from looking that was encouraging. But the second week I lost eight and one-half pounds more, and delighted was I that I kept right on using it, until at the end of the fifth week I had lost thirty-two pounds, and felt like a new woman. My health has improved, my headaches have entirely left me, and what delights me most is that while using your simple method I kept right on eating everything I craved. I could feed your system the only perfect one known for a speedy and safe reduction of flesh."

Much interest is shown in this new remarkable method by many well-known distinguished physicians, which proves that even doctors are willing to give up drugs and acknowledge this woman's method superior to all others. The distinguished physician, Dr. Walter Robinson, writes in and says:

"It is with much pleasure that I offer my grateful praise for splendid method of treatment for the reduction of superfluous flesh and double chin. Without the least opinion, could be more effective. This method is the only scientific method of treatment endorsed by the medical profession. I consider your method of treatment not only original, but remarkably clever, and the only truly scientific way to reduce superfluous flesh and double chin harmlessly and quickly."

Such splendid letters as these should be indisputable evidence of the remarkable merits of this treatment. The delightful letters from satisfied users which are being received daily from men and women are regarded as strictly confidential. Miss Hamilton considered it a great honor and privilege to permit publication of the addresses of those kind enough to express their thankful gratitude to her.

The most astonishing part of this fat-reducing method is that it does not create wrinkles or leave the skin flabby, but, on the contrary, it has a tendency to lighten flesh; anything not usually attempted by other methods.

All readers who wish to give up harmful diet, starvation methods; who wish to abandon the harmful internal and external remedies and appliances, should write for a copy of her latest work, so that they may learn how it is possible to at once begin the reduction of burdensome flesh.

Simply cut out the coupon below and mail it at once, as explained in coupon, and DON'T SEND A CENT OF MONEY, because parties are entirely free, as this charming "Calendar Girl" is glad to give this useful book, which brought about by her simple methods, that all who read it may enjoy the benefit men and women in need of a perfect home treatment which will benefit those forms with superfluous flesh, and thereby make life really worth while.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

SHORTS RUSH TO COVER UP

STATE STREET, May 20.—Closing.—Covering by shorts, who thought that a reaction was due and sold stocks yesterday, along with the reappearance of good buying orders, caused a general rally near the close, and the list gained over a quarter point on the day's trading.

Institution of proceedings against the so-called Lumber Trust was a disturbing factor in the early trading, but when pressure was put on the market support was quickly offered, and those who expected to depress prices were routed. That the market is to be well held is shown in the fact that the so-called leaders—Union, Reading, St. Paul, Rock Island and the copper issues showed the greatest gains.

There was a stock improved feeling in the copper market and this was well reflected in copper shares which, on the local board, showed more activity and strength than seen for a long time.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The market is full of purchasing orders and on further reactions more of these will be encountered. Because of this the reactions are expected to be short-lived and small.

Most of the selling comes from professionals who bought freely immediately after the decision was rendered. There also has been heavy selling by business men who have been using their funds to purchase securities under regular business furnished no opportunity for use of funds. Now that business is beginning to improve these persons are getting their money in shape for it.

Commercial paper is being offered more liberally than for many months, and this may mean that business is beginning already to revive. If business can begin to show revival in less than a month after the ad decision has been rendered it will be difficult to forecast the volume of trade that can come when the general public realizes what the Supreme Court has done and when the politicians realize what a blunder they are making in trying to discredit the Supreme Court.

Missouri Pacific won the right to be considered a widow's dower, which when the announcement was made that it would be in the near future bore about 10 points under short-term notes. This is the first big victory to give official expression of satisfaction at the Supreme Court decision. It is understood orders for this issue to be placed by the Missouri Pacific within a few days, and this will force the Steel Trust to increase its common stock in the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company plant.

Traders who take a superficial view of the stock market give credit for the recent rise in M. Peck and other declines in all stocks, including Tobacco and oil, was purely technical and there have come if Mr. Pack had never been heard from. The movement in the stock market is too broad to be influenced by anything that any one person may say. It is understood, however, that some of the speculative members of the Standard Oil party are honestly bearish as a result of the decision. These persons are supposed to be so sure that the rate may not actually reduce the dividend on that stock in support of their market position. Mr. Paul has discounted a reduction of the dividend to 25 per cent. and that reduction should have been made months ago.

This Is a Wonderful World of Ours

With Its Great Water Falls, That Died Ages Ago, and Its Little Shells, Found on Hilltops, That Tell Stories of Oceans Vanished

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

Here is a very interesting letter from a man who works for a living and who does what many of us neglect to do—he THINKS AND STUDIES FOR HIS OWN PLEASURE AND IMPROVEMENT.

After you have read his letter, get from some public library some book on geology—read it and find out how this old earth that we live on has been slowly and wonderfully built up and changed.

I am going to speak to you of the history of the physical world. I have thought of suggesting that you write a Sunday editorial upon it. I wish I could have some of my scientific friends take a trip to the south and see some of the wonders worked by the waters during the Glacial period.

At that time there was a great lake, which they call Lake Warren, which occupied all of that territory which the great lakes do now.

When the ice cap came down from the north, the outlet of the waters was crowded southward and the water came down Marcellus way and flowed south through the valley here.

It cut channels to get east, and finally went out to the ocean by way of Rome. It cut a channel 150 feet deep in the solid limestone, through which the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad runs, just south of the city.

There is a fossil cataract at Jamesville, over which fell a greater body of water than flows over Niagara now. It is out back some distance, and quite wide, and about 140 feet deep. Professor Fairchild, of Rochester, says it is worth going a thousand miles to see.

The rock in this section, as you may know, was laid down during the upper Silurian period of the Paleozoic age. At the quarry at the Onondaga reservation you will find fossils, corals, sponges, brachiopods and others which were imprisoned in this rock. Since that time the entire western country was built up.

Not only that, but the Grand Canyon of the Colorado in Arizona was cut out. It is 300 miles long and from 3,000 to 6,200 feet deep, cut in the solid rock by running water.

This silt was carried by the river and deposited in the Salton Sink. There billions of tons of abraded materials, carried by the Colorado River, have built up a territory of over 1,400 square miles.

This silt is, in some places, a mile deep. Professor Larkin says it took eons of time to cut out the Grand Canyon.

Before any of this rock was even built up, those little invertebrates were imprisoned in solid rock at Onondaga.

The Pirates of Pinhead Alley!

By F. OPPER

Copyright, 1911, by the International News Service

"I'm crazy 'bout that turkey trot!" Gayly singing the above popular song Hank Hencoop and Chester Chickenfeed waltzed gracefully about the barnyard. All nature smiled. Hank had seven dollars on him and Chet had four and a quarter. Joy! Their hearts beat high with hope. But hark! Suddenly, or even quicker than that, there was a loud, whirring noise and a huge airship came to a stop just over their heads. In an instant they were raised aloft by rough hands, their pockets were frisked and they were dropped to the ground. "Har, har, har!"

The above harsh, jeering laugh came from the lips of Mowing-Machine Mose, the pirate. The next moment he and Sawmill Sam, his confederate, had turned their aerial monster and vanished in the direction of Derry, New Hampshire. But hardly had this occurred when—

No Mystery Is Too Baffling for Him

One Really Modern American City

We have often prophesied that American cities will sooner or later copy the best features of municipal administration in German cities.

Lockport, N. Y., is probably the first to copy the German system completely. Lockport has just advertised for the services of a high-class, well-paid civic expert, who will perform the duties that usually belong to a Mayor's office. The successful applicant must have a record in civic administration.

As a preliminary to this radical move, Lockport adopted the commission form of government. It appointed five prominent citizens to take complete charge of municipal administration without salary. They constitute a civic board of directors, and will hire a business manager.

As one commentator remarks, this expert will have the entire city administration turned over to him with this injunction: "There's your work. Take it, run the city, hire your help, keep things clean, keep things healthy, be progressive, and we will watch and check results."

Lockport evidently believes in the recall principle, also, for the business manager will not be hired for any specified contract period at present. The city is feeling its way, as it were.

Here, at last, we have commission government brought down to date. The commission form of government, with the German system of hiring civic experts added to it, ought to bring results.

Other American cities will keenly watch the outcome of Lockport's experiment.

Fourteen Persons 2,000 Miles for One Fare

Who says it costs money to travel? If you were the fortunate possessor of thirteen children under five and carried them all on one ticket for 2,000 miles, would you have any but kind words for the railroads? That's what Mrs. Frank Scott, of Alberta, did when she journeyed from Canada to Oklahoma, where her husband had drawn one of Uncle Sam's prize allotments.

Imagine the astounded conductor when the proud mother presented her ticket! How he probably waited and stared and said, "Tickets, please." But there were the human facts, to wit: Arthur, Ashbel and Austin, triplets, aged four and a half; Arthur and Arnold, twins; Allen, Alvin and Almon, more triplets; Albert, Albion and Abel, still more triplets, and another set of twins yet to be named. All under five and all immune from fare.

Expressing a doubt along with his admiration the conductor was invited to inspect the family Bible which Mrs. Scott carried with her. There it was recorded, even as told, and the touring party rode on one adult's ticket.

No wonder the population of Oklahoma is forging rapidly onward.

Jesse Pomeroy's Letters to His Mother

The letters which Jesse Pomeroy, the Charlestown life convict, has written to his mother from his solitary cell are of real intrinsic interest, quite aside from the history of the man's crime.

These letters reveal more clearly than probably any other letters written in a prison what a man thinks and what he may accomplish while shut away from the world with no reasonable hope of escape.

As it happens, Pomeroy is better qualified to write about prison life from the standpoint of a convict, because of his great literary and linguistic ability, than any other prisoner who ever described that phase of life.

The one thing that stands out beyond everything else is the education that an imprisoned person may obtain unaided by a teacher, if the proper books are available and the student has the will to apply himself. The personality of Pomeroy himself need not be considered in finding deep interest and much instruction in his letters, the first instalment of which will be printed exclusively in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About Pa as a Byron

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WIFE, sed Pa wen he calm hom last nite, here is a chanst for me to git famous.

What, sed Ma, aggen? I thought you was famous already.

Well, sed Pa, I wasent ever so famous as I am going to be now. Look at this ad in the Sunday paper. It says that the Sunday editor will pay a thousand dollars for a poem as good as anything Lord Byron ever rote.

I see, sed Ma. The Sunday editor dosent want much, does he. Why dosent he make it a thousand dollars & fifteen cents. There are no Byrons now, sed Ma.

There is going to be a Byron now, sed Pa. He stands beefour you this minnit. Watch his smoak.

Do you mean, sed Ma, that you are going to try for that prize. That is jest what I mean, sed Pa, nothing moar or less. I have a sort of hunch that I am the Byron of the age. & the thousand will cum in mitey handy, too, sed Pa.

You dosent look like Byron, sed Ma. Byron was tall & clean cut, like Jim Corbett, or Allan Sangree, sed Ma. You look most like Charley Sumerville, only he is hansum.

Then Pa got mad & sed he wasent going to read Ma the poem he had rote wich was to be the Byron poem of the age, but I took hold of his sleeve when he was going out of the room & asked him to read it.

Let me go, Bobbie, sed Pa. Yes, Bobbie, sed Ma, let him go. But I dident let Pa go, & this is the Byron poem wich he read:

I have not loved the world, or the wurld me,
I walk the Common full of scorn and gloom,
Let all the actors bright & happy be.
Sad I was born & sad I face my doom.
What do I care for peepul gay & placid?
All of my joints is full of kinks & acid.

Well, wife, sed Pa, how do you like it as far as it has went? Did Byron ever rite anything moar gloomy and grand?

He nerver wrote anything sadder, sed Ma. I wish the laundry wud cum, so I can get a nice clean handkerchif & cry into it. How does the rest of it go? Then Pa kep on reesiting:

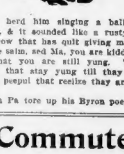
I stood in Venice, near Los Angeles,
Watching the shellfish in their childish play,
But what are unessenshul things like these?
I never felt as gloomy as to-day.
Roll on, thou dark & deep blue oshun, roll!
I wish I had the horse my father stole.

Grand, sed Ma. You are a reel poet. You are all that you claim for yureself, the Byron of to-day. Give me a kiss, Byron, sed Ma. When do you git the thousand dollars?

I wish you wud stop kidding me, sed Pa.

I know you never thought much of my work, but this poem of mine is going to get the gravy as sure as you live. There is three moar verses of it, but I guess I wont resite them to you as long as you talk fun of everything I do.

Lissen, husband, sed Ma, you reemind me a whole lot of Meyer Cohen. You dosent reelize that you are getting old. There was a time, sed Ma, wen you & Mister Cohen was full of ability. I herd him sing onst, twenty yeers ago, wen thay called him the golden voiced baritone of the Pacifick slope. The other day, sed



Ma, I herd him singing a ballad at a benefit, & it sounded like a runty cowbell on a cow that has quit giving milk. You are the saim, sed Ma, you are kidding yureself that you are still young. The only peepul that stay yung till thay die, sed Ma, is peepul that reelize thay are getting old.

Then Pa tore up his Byron poem.

The Country Estate, Large or Small; How to Care For.

If you have a large country estate, your superintendent should know how to care for it without the aid of a book. If he doesn't, fire him and get a new one.

If you have a small estate consisting of, say, a quarter of an acre, the first thing to do is to employ a landscape gardener who will advise you how the wooded portion should be laid out. A few large trees planted in the proper position will give an appearance of age that is too often lacking in the $1,998.50 bungalow so popular to-day.

One corner of the estate should be made into a vegetable garden. Nothing looks more homelike and useful than a vegetable garden, and, with the aid of a good grocer, quite a small one will supply the family with all the necessary vegetables for the table. In planting the vegetable garden it is customary to use vegetable seeds, which should be purchased in carefully labeled packages, as it is almost impossible to recognize a turnip seed, for example, by comparing it with a turnip. It is also more or less of a disappointment to rely upon sweet peas as a product for the table. However, all little annoyances and disappointments may be forgotten if you keep a good stock of various canned vegetables. You can tell your guests that these are your own—as, of course, they are, when you have paid for them—and they will praise your garden warmly. Many a suburban horticulturist owes his reputation to a can opener.

Other parts of the estate should be given over to tennis courts, flower garden, swimming pool, wilderness, terraces, formal garden, sunken garden, etc. These will take up about all the space in your quarter acre plot. A formal garden is just an ordinary garden in a bobbie skirt. The wilderness is easily made by throwing all empty cans into one particular spot and by inviting the neighbors' children to play on your property. The ordinary tennis court turns into a swimming pool in wet weather. It is just as well to remove the net or you may find yourself caught by the gills when trying a long dive.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

CIVIL SERVICE BOARD METHODS.

Editor AMERICAN:

Last September when the examination for policemen was held by the Civil Service Board there were over 70 men who passed with a mark of 80 per cent, or over, filling the eligible list, yet they saw fit to call a special examination in April, in this a lawful method or just a matter of form to make possible a position for men who failed in the previous regular examination? If such is the case it seems rather unfair to the men who are already on the list.

A. H. S.

Boston.

P. S.—At the present time I have learned that there are 150 men on the eligible list.

OBEDIENCE TO LAW

Editor AMERICAN:

"Reasonable and unreasonable."

Do we remember what compromising means? Do we still remember the Missouri Compromise?

No question is ever settled until it is settled right.

The law and obedience thereto. No monopoly should be more powerful than the government itself.

Overstepping the mark.

Well, let us move along and see what next?
